A Backstage Look At Rock 'N' Roll Revival XXXI

By Emily Allgair
Student Intern

For over 30 years, the annual production of Rock 'N' Roll Revival at Severna Park High School has entertained the community through the showcase of its talented student body. With the start of a new decade, meaning newer songs being added to the set list, and new artistic ideas joining the show's vision, Rock 'N' Roll Revival XXXI: True Colors is an exciting experience for everyone. And who better than this production's student leaders to give the inside scoop on what happens backstage?

This year, the students involved in Rock 'N' Roll Revival XXXI have been hard at work since January. Despite their role in the show, each student involved has had to handle the diligent task of "being able to manage your school life, social life, and performance life and getting it all together, but especially being able to put it all behind you when you get on-stage," said student producer Annabelle Cotton.

"The most difficult thing about being a student leader is knowing that [Rock 'N' Roll Revival] is almost over for all of us," said student choreographer Simone Werner. "I know that when the show comes to a close in March, we are all going to miss it so much."

For those who know the show, it is hard to pick a favorite or most satisfying moment, but for student director Sarah Kalafos, "there is nothing better than watching people trying new things and being successful, and being happy and proud of themselves because they didn't know they could do that."

"Just watching the discovery on kids' faces when they realize that they can do something," added Kalafos, "is just, like, the best feeling ever."

When asked what she thinks audiences would find most surprising about the actual process of putting Rock 'N' Roll together, student director Emily Allgair said how each number has only two or three rehearsals up until the » Continued on A9

The Shack Is Back!

By Judy Tacyn

Last year when Arnold resident Ben Hilliard heard that Bill and Stacey Prevezanos were hanging up their aprons after more than 30 years as owners of Severna Park's beloved Donut Shack, he put in a bid in hopes of keeping the area's sweetest destination open for generations to come. Though he didn't ultimately purchase the Donut Shack, Hilliard was relieved to learn the new owners were going to keep the tasty business running, until it wasn't.

For several months in 2019, something, or even many things, didn't add up to Severna Park's expectations. Locals took to social media to share their frustration that the Prevezanos family wasn't the only thing missing in the Donut Shack's special ingredients. Daily Facebook posts and clever memes showed just how much "Parkies" loved their "shack."

"It was heartbreaking," said Hilliard of the social media backlash. "It was clear that everybody wanted their Donut Shack back, the shack they grew up with and loved. I thought, 'What if [I had purchased the business]?"

Hilliard's lament was short lived. As quality, service and cleanliness went down, the chatter in Severna Park ramped up. After being open for only seven months, the Donut Shack closed and was up for sale again. This time Hilliard wasn't going to let his donut dreams leave a sour taste in his mouth.

Hilliard quickly mobilized a group and put in another bid in December; this time he purchased the Donut Shack.

Longtime friend and former restaurant coworker Ali Matthews is a co-owner with Hilliard. She, too, is a local resident who wanted to restore the business to its former glory. They entered the store on January 3, 2020, and have since spent every waking hour cleaning the store. On February 8, Matthews made the following post on the Donut Shack's Facebook page:

Good morning! My name is Ali, and I am one of the new owners of the Donut Shack. We took over two weeks ago and have been working hard to reopen. I have so many wonderful memories of the Donut Shack and am thrilled to now be on the other side of the counter helping make them. I have been in the restaurant business for 30 years. I live locally. I am a mother. I am already a part of the community. Most of all, I love donuts and I am fully committed to re-establishing the legacy of the Donut Shack. Plainly stated, this means FRESH donuts, GREAT coffee, and a WELCOMING atmosphere.

News of Donut Shack's purchase by local people willing to re-establish its legacy in Severna Park spread faster than a grease fire. This time, social media chatter lit up with expressions of support and promises to return to the new and improved Donut Shack.

"The Donut Shack was an affordable destination and it was special," said Matthews. "I started bringing my son here as a treat for just us. Another partner remembers sitting at the same stool every Sunday to enjoy a donut with family. These are our memories, and we know most of our neighbors have memories, too."

Hoping to bring the traditions alive again, Hilliard and » Continued on A5

School Buses To Get Stop Sign Cameras

By Zach Sparks
zach@pasadenavoices.com

When the Anne Arundel County Council unanimously passed a school bus camera law on February 3, they didn't have to go far to put a face to the issue. Students across the county have been put at risk by drivers cruising past the red flashing lights and extended signs.

Severna Park High School sophomore Allie Johnson was one of those students. She had just exited her bus on Truckhouse Road on October 24, 2019 when an oncoming car hit her. The day is still fresh in the mind of Allie's mom, Stefanie Johnson.

Allie Johnson

"My husband and I both felt complete terror," Stefanie said. "No one thinks they will get a phone call about their child like that. It is terrifying and frightening not knowing what you're about to see going to an accident site knowing your child has been hit by a car, being thrown in the air."

Some buses currently have cameras on the inside, but the new law designates that cameras be placed on the » Continued on A7

Teen Climate Activists Warn Delegation Of Air Quality, Highlight Chances To Act

Fridays for Future Annapolis teens addressed the Anne Arundel County delegation of the Maryland General Assembly on February 14. Students included (l-r) Emma Seiss, Ella Mouldsdale, Grace Pilar Ebel, Nicole Rubilotta and Jessica Garbarczyk.

By Brenda Wintrode

On February 14, two Severna Park High School students sought the support of the Anne Arundel County delegation on environmental legislation aimed at improving air quality and banning plastic grocery bags and bee-killing chemicals.

"We're here to take back our futures," said Severna Park freshman Ella Mouldsdale, as she read from a prepared speech at the delegation's weekly public meeting. "As political leaders in Maryland, we want your commitment to supporting bills that help the environment."

The young activists shared Maryland air quality statistics and asked the delegation to cap carbon emissions on power plants located in the state. They were met with silence from the delegation and left the meeting saying they were frustrated they were not heard.

"We really need to treat this as a crisis," Mouldsdale said afterward. "I think this should be our top priority, and it didn't look like it was our top priority today."

A spokesperson for the region's Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) confirmed that portions of Anne Arundel County that are within 26.8 kilometers of one of Pasadena's two power plants, H.A. Wagner's unit three stack, are currently designated by the EPA as "nonattainment," or not meeting the 2010 sulfur dioxide national ambient air quality standards (NAAQS). The EPA in 2010 established the maximum acceptable sulfur dioxide air measurement as 75 parts per billion.

Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) spokesperson Jay Apperson said the measurements of a monitor installed at Riviera Beach Elementary in January 2018 has "provided reassurance" of the air quality.

"We are measuring very low levels of [sulfur dioxide], as we expected, with an annual hourly average of 1.7 ppb, well below the health-based standard of 75 ppb," Apperson wrote in an email.

Three years of clean measurements are required by the EPA to designate an area as "attainment," or having acceptable air quality measurements. The EPA said the earliest MDE could apply for attainment designation for this portion of Anne Arundel County again would be midyear 2021. Until then, the area is listed as "nonattainment."

Margueritte Mills
Volunteer
Of The Month

Local Volunteers Dress
Up Rock 'N' Roll Revival

Rock 'N' Roll Revival volunteers Jenn Allgair (center) and Gina Dicks (right) were presented the Margueritte Mills Volunteer of the Month award by the Severna Park Voice Chief Operating Officer Larry Sells.

By Haley Weisgerber

Severna Park High School's annual Rock 'N' Roll Revival has become an important tradition in the community. The elaborate sets, musical numbers and costumes "wow" audiences year after year.

While the students are hard at work in rehearsals, parent volunteers like Jenn Allgair and Gina Dicks are behind the scenes making sure every detail is in place. Allgair and Dicks put their imagination to work in the costume department.

Before student rehearsals began, Allgair and Dicks were already working on costumes.

"When the song list comes out, we are given direction on the vision and the colors for each song," said Allgair, whose daughter is a senior cast member and student leader. "Other costume volunteers sign up for different songs. Then it becomes working together with everyone to accomplish this overall look of the show."

This year's theme is "True Colors," so each color scheme has been carefully chosen to represent the title of the song, the time period or the artist.

"You get to know all of the kids and they all become your kids. They are all amazing. They really are."

— GINA DICKS

Allgair was initially invited to join the costume team when her daughter was a freshman, and she was instantly hooked.

"What I like about the costumes is that you are just a little part of making their time out on-stage a big deal to them," said Allgair.

Dicks, who has a daughter and son in the cast, worked on costumes for her daughter's shows for years. When the opportunity arose to join the Rock 'N' Roll Revival team, she jumped at the chance.

"It gives them the confidence to go out there," said Dicks. "When they feel good, you can see it come across onstage."

While there is some shopping involved, the women try to repurpose costumes from previous years. This is where their creativity comes into play. Allgair and Dicks said that they didn't realize how imaginative they were until they began working on costumes.

"It is really cool to see what other people come up with," said Allgair. "You kind of work off of each other and suggest things."

Allgair and Dicks agreed that working with the other costume moms and collaborating makes the experience a little easier.

"It's a village to costume the show," said Dicks. "We develop some great friendships."

While the friendships are an added bonus, both women agree that the best part of volunteering is working closely with the students.

"This is one of the opportunities you have to work directly with the kids," said Dicks. "As they get older, it gets harder to volunteer in school and do things with them. You get to know all of the kids and they all become your kids. They are all amazing. They really are."

The Arc Announces Fund
To Support Children
With Disabilities

The Arc Central Chesapeake Region, a nonprofit committed to transforming lives for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD), has more than $30,000 available for Maryland youth through their Family Fund grant. Created in 2017, the Family Fund provides grants for services and supports not covered by insurance.

"We are very grateful for the generosity of our community, which makes this fund possible," said Jonathon Rondeau, CEO of The Arc. "There are effective therapies, services and adaptive equipment available to support children with disabilities, but these resources are expensive, and are often not covered by insurance. With our Family Fund, we work to fill the gaps in access to the supports we know make a significant difference in the lives of youth with a disability."

This grant cycle includes $10,000 of autism-specific funding, contributed by

The Bowen Foundation for Autism.

"We are excited to widen the reach of the Family Fund, with the support of our affiliate, The Bowen Foundation for Autism," said Rondeau. "Last year we granted out $20,000. We are grateful for the opportunity to provide even more support to the community, as access to these supports are critical in ensuring children with disabilities thrive."

The Arc is seeking applicants who have a child with I/DD under the age of 21, who reside in Maryland. Applications for the Family Fund opened March 1, and awards will be issued in May. The complete application is available on The Arc's website, www.thearccc.org/familyfund.

The Family Fund does not cover emergency or crisis requests. If you require emergency funding, contact resources@thearccc.org and The Arc will assist you with appropriate resources.

Strike Out Cancer Returns March 14

By Zach Sparks

zach@pasadenavoice.com

Country music singer Craig Campbell was 11 years old when his father died of colon cancer.

"The older I got, the more questions I had about what took him away from me," said Campbell, whose father was just 36. "I realized it could have been prevented had it been caught earlier."

Determined to educate people that the cancer is preventable, Severna Park Lanes owner Mike Hall and Severna Park Voice Chief Operating Officer Larry Sells started the fundraiser Strike Out Cancer in 2017.

Calling the event a "Two Good Guys production" — named for two good guys trying to support a great cause — Hall and Sells invited Campbell and other musicians to perform while guests enjoyed bowling, a silent auction and food.

Strike Out Cancer raised $10,250 in its first year and doubled that total with $20,500 in its second year. All funds went to Fight Colorectal Cancer (Fight CRC), an advocacy organization providing information on colon and rectal cancer research, treatment and policy.

For this year's Strike Out Cancer event on Saturday, March 14, attendees can expect the same exciting atmosphere.

"We have a great lineup, so people can come put for music and a good meal," Hall said.

Campbell will perform "Stronger Than That" and a couple songs "to get people drinking." Joining Campbell will be Devon Nickoles, Case & Barley, Dwayne Wilson, and Jackson Dean, the former Arundel High School football player who captured widespread media attention after his national anthem video went viral in October 2018. Dean has since signed with Little Louder Music and is working with writers from Eric Church's team.

In addition to music, this year's event will have prize drawings, 50-50 raffles, a silent auction, and food catered by Outback Steakhouse.

Campbell expects the day to be just as fun as his last outing in 2017.

"I had a blast," he said. "The only time I've ever performed on a bowling alley was that day."

Like Campbell, Hall and

Sells have reason to advocate for change. Sells' father had colorectal cancer, but luckily, it was diagnosed early and he survived. While not colorectal, Hall's mother had cancer.

With March being Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month, it's a good time for Strike Out Cancer.

"For the advocates and survivors and Fight CRC, this is the kickoff event to call on Congress to make sure they're giving this the funding it needs," Hall said.

As a spokesperson for Fight CRC, Campbell is one of those people advocating for more support.

"My goal is to make sure people know that colon colorectal cancer, if detected early, is preventable," Campbell said. "No kid has to grow up without a parent because of this."

Strike Out Cancer is a private event at Severna Park Lanes from 5:00pm to 10:00pm on March 14. Advance tickets are required. For a $50 donation, guests can enjoy music, bowling, food, soda and water. A $35 ticket buys standing-room-only, no bowling.

Activists Warn Delegation Of Air Quality

and H.A. Wagner, wrote in an email that the company would not provide comment for this article.

State Delegate Mark Chang, a District 32 Democrat and the delegation vice chair, said Mouldsdale and a fellow student activist were heard.

"They did a wonderful job," Chang said, noting his colleagues may not have commented because the activists sent out their statements in advance, and the meeting's time limit was approaching.

House Minority Leader Nic Kipke, a Republican from District 31B, said he wanted to encourage the students to know they were heard.

"I'm sorry that they left feeling that way, but they certainly had an impact by being there," said Kipke.

Mouldsdale, along with Severna Park senior Emma Seiss, started Fridays for Future Annapolis, a branch of the climate strike group started by Swedish activist Greta Thunberg. Since convening last September, the local group has held two climate strikes in downtown Annapolis and is planning another for April 22, Earth Day.

Mouldsdale told the delegation that the air Marylanders breathe is unhealthy based on EPA standards.

"Warming temperatures and sea-level rises are due to the astronomical amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere," she said.

The American Lung Association's report, "State of the Air 2019," gave Anne Arundel County, five other Maryland counties, and Baltimore City an F, or an "unhealthy" rating, based on a weighted average of days with elevated air pollution levels.

"We sit before you today not asking for your help but begging you to save our futures," said 17-year-old Seiss.

Seiss and Mouldsdale scheduled their slot at the delegation meeting in January to share their legislative priorities. Topping the group's list was House Bill 1545, which would place carbon emission limits on six coal-burning power plants in Maryland. Two of them, H.A. Wagner and Brandon Shores, are in Pasadena.

"Nonrenewable energy is a thing of the past that harms the employees and the air breathed by your constituents," said 15-year-old Mouldsdale. "If Maryland puts a cap on carbon emissions from these plants, we'll be doing our part to prevent climate crisis and provide cleaner air."

The bill, sponsored by Delegate Kumar Barve, a Montgomery County Democrat, would also establish funds to invest in clean and renewable energy sources, apprenticeships and job retraining, the decommissioning of existing coal-burning infrastructure, and financial support for coal plant workers close to retirement age.

Senator Sarah Elfreth (Democrat-District 30) is the only member of the county delegation co-sponsoring the bill. Senator Chris West (Democrat-District 42) is the lead Senate sponsor.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics projected the two fastest-growing occupations from 2018 to 2028 will be solar panel installers and wind turbine service technicians, at 63% and 57%, respectively. During the same time period, power plant jobs are expected to decrease by 6%.

The students said they are also watching House Bill 229, which would ban any use of the pesticide chlorpyrifos, or insecticide containing the chemical. The EPA rejected a proposed ban on the chemical in 2019 but still issues strong warnings on its website for those applying the chemical.

Two other bills the students named were House Bill 209, a ban on plastic grocery bags, and the Climate Crisis Education Act, which would fund state education enhancements with fines imposed on corporate polluters.

When the presenters finished speaking, Chang asked the delegation if they had questions for the guests, and seeing none, he requested the other "Fridays" members in the audience stand and introduce themselves. Grace Pilar Ebel, a Severna School junior, and South River High School juniors Jessica Garbarczyk and Nicole Rubilotta responded to his request.

Chang said in a phone interview that he was "very impressed" with the young women's presentation.

Delegate Heather Bag-nall (Democrat-District 33) approached the young women after their talk on Friday. A staff member for Delegate Alice Cain (Democrat-District 30A) met with the group on Wednesday to hear their agenda. Cain was out sick on Friday but shared in an email that she was "impressed by [the girls'] commitment and enthusiasm."

"The youth will be watching," Seiss told the delegation in closing. "We will hold you accountable for your actions that prevent us from having a future."

The Shack Is Back!

 Matthews feel the pressure to restore Donut Shack in all of its glory. They reached out to Bill and Stacey Prevezanos, who also watched in horror as their legacy, the business they loved and nurtured for decades, began to decay.

“There is certainly a learning curve. Mr. Bill made it look easy, but it’s definitely not easy!” said Matthews. “The success of the business, the heart of the business, is because of Bill and Stacy. We knew we had to include them in the rebirth of the Donut Shack.”

“Look, a donut is a donut, albeit a delicious donut, but it is everything else they did,” said Matthews of the Prevezanos family. “There is so much more that goes into the Donut Shack experience. We know that, and we are completely committed to honoring the history and recipes that made the Donut Shack special. It’s a tremendous responsibility.”

Hilliard and Matthews said that the menu won’t change, although the coffee brewed will be Annapolis-roasted Ceremony Coffee. They will produce what was offered with Bill in the kitchen, but probably not all at the same time. “I’d rather do 30 donuts really well than attempt 60 donuts not so well,” said Matthews. “We will get there, but we have a lot to learn before we can get to Bill’s level of proficiency.”

Matthews hopes the social media comments will be different this time around.

“Feedback is essential, and I’d like to address comments in person,” said Matthews, noting that she and Hilliard will be present in the 24-hour business.

“Feedback leads to relationships, and that’s what we want to foster,” added Hilliard.

Hilliard teased that a new neon window sign will be hung soon. “When the paper comes off the windows and the new sign is on, we will be open,” he said. “The tradition will continue, and we sincerely hope that Severna Park residents will give us a chance.”

Matthews concurs. “This isn’t just a job, it’s a long-term investment. We are 100% committed to maintaining the legacy that Bill and Stacey created, and to keep the Donut Shack firmly woven into the fabric of the community,” she said.

Lauren’s Law: Animal Tales

Lauren Burke Meyer
 As an Annapolis resident, I’m afraid to admit this: I haven’t always been an animal person. I’m told that I was fond of our family Lizard, Sammy. In fact, my middle name used to be Elizabeth, so it’s likely how my childhood nickname of Lizard came to be.

Later, when I was in fourth grade, it was time for the big leagues. My neighbors trusted me to watch their dog, Calvin. You could say we didn’t get off on the best of foots. Calvin emptied his bladder upon my entrance. Nothing a few paper towels couldn’t help. However, things got interesting on Christmas Eve when I dropped their house key down a sewer ... talk about some yuletide excitement. The family wasn’t set to return for a few more days. Thank goodness for the engineering minds of my next-door neighbors, who recovered the key with a fishing rod in less than an hour.

One year later, I drew the lucky straw and was the chosen one to take the class hamster home for the first weekend of the school year. My even luckier parents were fortunate to take in those hamster fumes for three days of Labor Day weekend. I was petting the hamster when he peed in my hand. Startled, I dropped the hamster and ran to get paper towels. These animal adventures were certainly keeping Bounty in business. When I came back, I couldn’t find the hamster. My first thought was that all my classmates would hate me for losing the class pet. Thankfully, he didn’t get too far. I found him on our screened-in porch. Crisis averted, and the class hamster lived to go home with another responsible 10-year-old the next weekend.

Over the years, there were many goldfish in the Burke household. St. Andrews Swim Club would do fun contests on the Fourth of July to win goldfish. If memory serves me right, we won goldfish during a greased watermelon contest. Classic suburbia. The fish won that day didn’t survive their breadcrumbs feeding. However, fish from a pet store did live to see many more days. Our beloved Tic Tac lived to be 7 years old. We may or may not have played a few games of tag. There was no greater sign of love to this fish than my father cleaning out our oversized fish tank on Sundays.

In 2011, my roommate, Kearny, wanted my blessing to bring a puppy into the house. I was on the fence about it. Luckily, that didn’t stop Kearny from bringing home a yellow Lab named Lilly. Before I knew it, I was volunteering for dog-sitting again. Lilly kicked like a little kid, but I’d still share my bed with her any day. I even brought her to work. I felt like a first-time parent, incredibly nervous while we drove there. One of my favorite memories of Lilly is when my roommates and I came home after a night out in downtown Annapolis. The Us Weekly was shredded to pieces and The Capital laid next to it unscathed. The girl knew what she liked, and it was clearly a gossip magazine. While no longer my fourth roommate, Lilly lives down the street from me, and I can visit to give her belly rubs any time I want.

Well, I must go search on Petfinder or Lab Rescue now. Hope to find my own Lilly one day.

Lauren Burke Meyer is a Severna Park native who was inspired to write Lauren’s Law as a play on the well-known Murphy’s Law adage: “anything that can go wrong, will go wrong.”

Donut Shack’s new owners, Ben Hilliard and Ali Matthews, are learning from original owners Bill and Stacey Prevezanos as they attempt to bring the spot back to its former glory.

MILITARY SPOTLIGHT

Family Has Sent Six Into Service

By Zach Sparks

When 2011 Chesapeake High graduate Brandon Bryley decided in 2017 that he wanted to join the Navy, he didn't have to look far for inspiration. His grandfather, John Williams, was once a Marine and had four brothers who also served in the military.

Only one of the brothers is still alive, but two generations later, Bryley is carrying on the tradition of the family's service. He initially wanted to join the Marine Corps, but as he grew older, he developed an affinity for being on the water.

A Navy recruiter found the right words to sway Bryley. He was at Divers Academy International in New Jersey after attending Wesley College, and he decided to finish his diving season before heading to Pensacola, Florida, in winter 2018 for A School as an air traffic controller.

The eight-week boot camp in Illinois was not what he expected.

"I thought it was going to be if you're strong and you're smart, you get by and it's actually the complete opposite," he said. "We were put in divisions. You're only as strong as your weakest link."

After arriving in Pensacola, Bryley held positions as administrator of his barracks (assisting the military training instructors), class leader and formation leader.

Now, Bryley is at FACSAC VACAPES (Fleet Area Control and Surveillance Facility Virginia Capes) doing air traffic control, "which is all radar extending from Maine down to South Carolina," he said. "I've gotten qualified on Langley and Yankee sector (two sectors which were part of trying to stop 9/11 from happening); my facility was all over the 9/11 tapes."

Bryley has three years and three months left at his command, and he expects to be a fully qualified supervisor before the end of summer. After receiving accelerated advancement in November and getting promoted to petty officer third class (AC3), he is set to take the second class exam in two weeks.

"I hold multiple collateral duties: repair parts petty officer, which is in charge of the division's budget for any equipment we would need, and publications evaluation board member, which looks over our letters of agreement with other facilities, our FACMAN (facility manual) and any other publication which is used in ATC," he said.

While Bryley is in the early stages of his military career, his family has been piecing together the past using news clippings. One in particular noted the service of his grandfather, Williams, and two half-brothers named James "Jimmy" Hannan and Joe Hannan.

Williams was a supply specialist in Quantico, Virginia. Younger half-brother Joe Hannan was a Marine serving in Korea but was lucky enough to avoid the war zone. Two other half-brothers, Charles "Leo" Kelm and Bernard Kelm of Pasadena, also joined the Marines.

The sole living veteran is James Hannan, who lives in Bowie, Maryland. He said he joined the Air Force at age 18 in 1950 because everybody else was doing it, and it was a good job and training to start with. James was a staff sergeant with the 57th Strategic Reconnaissance Squadron in Oahu, Hawaii.

"I worked in the supply office," he said. "I received all kinds of materials, clothing, tools, etc. I handed out tools to the airplane mechanics and clothing to pilots."

His military service spanned November 1950 to July 1954.

"As part of my job, I was one of the few people who had the opportunity to see the box that held the first hydrogen bomb for testing in the Pacific in 1952," he said.

James also has a strong recollection of his younger half-brother Charles "Leo" Kelm serving in the Marine Corps.

"He originally volunteered for Seal training, but when the war got going, he was pulled from that training to become a squad leader in the jungles of Vietnam," James said.

Bryley won't be thrashing through the jungles of Vietnam, but he's pleased with his decision to join the Navy, and he has sage advice for anyone considering the same decision.

"If somebody is thinking about doing it, don't overthink it, because you might psyche yourself out or think of only the cons or other routes you can take with your life," Bryley said. "You might think eventually you will find something better, but then you'll look back with regret."

Neighbors Score Big With S(o)uper Bowl Food Drive

The event was successful due to the participation of 26 neighborhoods from Severna Park and the Broadneck peninsula.

The Kansas City Chiefs weren't the only big winners this winter. Good Neighbors Group held its S(o)uper Bowl Food Drive, collecting more than 4,500 items for Serving People Across Neighborhoods (SPAN) and My Brother's Pantry.

The event was successful due to the participation of 26 neighborhoods from Severna Park and the Broadneck peninsula. Severna Gardens, an 82-home community, donated 615 items and was named the winning neighborhood.

"To determine the winning neighborhood, we look at a ratio of the size of the neighborhood to the number of items collected," said

Julie Shay, the founder of Good Neighbors Group.

Ron and Jen Weist were the neighborhood captains responsible for the success of Severna Gardens, which was also one of two winners in 2019. Runners-up for 2020 included Woodberry Farms, West Severna Park, Winchester on the Severn, Westridge and Fair Oaks.

To learn about other service opportunities offered by Good Neighbors Group, email contact@goodneighborsgroup.org. The nonprofit will be included in the Severna Park Earth Day Festival on April 25 from 10:00am-1:00pm at Severna Park High School.

stop arms that extend out from the bus.

Peter Baron, director of government relations for County Executive Stuart Pittman's administration, said it was no coincidence that this was Pittman's first proposed bill of 2020.

"We've all seen it happen, right. Somebody is impatient while a school bus is stopped and goes past it ... It's terrifying," Baron said. "The bill won't stop people from being reckless and irresponsible, but it will allow us to find them and deter them and hopefully lessen this."

According to the Anne Arundel County Police Department, there were 88 cases where drivers failed to stop in 2019 and 13 cases where drivers failed to remain stopped. Those numbers were down from 2018 when 134 drivers failed to stop and 14 did not remain stopped.

Montgomery County has passed similar legislation, with great impact. In July 2019, Montgomery County Police Department Assistant Chief David Anderson emphasized that point to the Montgomery County Council. "Unfortunately we've had some very high-profile criminal acts with students as victims, and this camera system ... captured those acts and are going to put people in prison for victimizing children," Anderson said.

When caught on camera, motorists can be imposed with civil fine of $250. Drivers pulled over by police officers after passing school buses can pay up to $500 under Maryland law, according to Major Ross Passman of the Anne Arundel County Police Department.

No amount of money can make up for the harm done to Allie Johnson, but Allie is happy to see positive changes that may keep another student from being put in danger.

Allie is currently taking two classes a day at school and receiving home health teaching. According to Stefanie, Allie has several severe injuries from the accident.

"One current obstacle is daily debilitating headaches," Stefanie said. "It limits her on school and everyday activities. Allie is 16 and should be able to enjoy time with friends and start driving; this accident has changed that completely for her. She can't think about driving or do fun outings if she can't get through a day without a severe headache and constant doctor appointments. Allie was a normal teenager just getting off the bus to go home, and in an instant, it has changed her and our families lives forever."

For the seven-member Anne Arundel County Council, there was no debate. The cameras offer additional safety measures while accruing no extra cost to taxpayers.

"The company owns the equipment — they install it, they calibrate it, they monitor it, they provide the feeds," said Alex Szachnowicz, chief operating officer for Anne Arundel County Public Schools. "They will also provide expert witness testimony should a matter go to trial and the veracity of the equipment on the calibration needs to be questioned."

Bill 1-20 was signed into law by Pittman on February 14, and from that date, it has 45 days before going into effect.

"Our hope is if drivers that pass stopped school buses are heavily fined, it will make drivers think twice about that decision and have drivers take that decision more seriously," Stefanie said.

Kinder Playground Gets Facelift

Since its construction in 1998, the Kinder Farm Park playground has been enjoyed by thousands of kids. Its service life had finally come to an end, according to the Friends of Kinder Farm Park, an advocacy group that supports the park through fundraising and volunteer activities. Park workers began dismantling the 22-year-old playground in December to make way for a new one. Starting in late January, construction began. Work will be completed this spring. The new playground will incorporate swings, slides, climbing equipment and farm-themed pieces.

Health Coach, Author Creates Healing Slumber Party For Women

Nationally acclaimed wellness expert and speaker Lisa Consiglio Ryan has created the Winter Healing Slumber Party for women to be held on March 7 and 8 at the Annapolis Westin Hotel, coinciding with International Women's Day on March 8.

The Voice caught up with the energetic Severna Park resident to get the 411 on the area's healthiest sleeper.

Hi, Lisa. Can you tell our readers a bit about yourself?

Hello! I'm Lisa Consiglio Ryan. I taught elementary school and was a mentor teacher in Prince George's County Public Schools for 15 years before I decided to follow my passion of wellness and teach nutrition and healthy lifestyle.

After trying every diet out there, which led to spending years struggling with a growing arsenal of health-destroying conditions that ranged from fibromyalgia, hypothyroidism, candida and rosacea to cystitis and tons of allergies, plus depression, I decided to turn to nutrition and lifestyle to reclaim my health.

I grew up with the typical standard American diet and had been known to sprinkle sugar on my Frosted Flakes as a child. Clean eating was not on the radar for me and my family, obviously. After finding ways to heal alternatively (acupuncture, cranial sacral therapy, polarity, massage, chiropractic work, energy healing), I was able to take that last step and add in the food factor - real, whole, organic and anti-inflammatory food. I haven't been on medications for more than 20 years and counting, and I rely on clean eating as my staple of self-care.

Looking to up my nutrition game, I became a certified integrative nutrition health coach and published the award-winning, best-selling cookbook "Go Clean, Sexy You." I also found juice. As I got involved in the plant-based way of living, I realized how powerful juice was to reverse illness and heal the body. Now I drink cold-pressed organic juice every day.

How long have you been interested in women's health and wellness?

Probably as far as I can remember. Unfortunately, I started out with a negative view of wellness and food at a young age of 8 years old. I was told I was fat and chubby growing up, so I constantly had food on the brain. I dedicated my days to eating as little as I could. This, of course, led to dieting in my 20's, but it wasn't until I realized that food was fuel for my body that I began to take my interest in wellness and help others. I believe it's been 20 years of delving deep into the positivity of the wellness world after growing up with a different perspective.

How did the idea of the retreat and slumber party come about?

It's been a vision of mine since I founded my health consulting business, Whole

Health Designs, LLC. That was 10 years ago!

I wanted to not only bring holistic health and wellness awareness to the local and surrounding communities but to support women who are in crisis in our area, who are struggling with the basics in life, who also need self-care strategies, such learning to take deep breaths, asking for help, etc.

A portion of the slumber party proceeds will go to YWCA's Weinberg Residence, a domestic violence safe house, which is in need of basics like towels, toiletries, and anything that will assist in keeping the residence available to house women in crisis. When women support women, magic happens. Healing happens.

Who should attend this event and why?

All should attend! Mainly if you are someone who is in need of a timeout in life. WHSP is a way to invite a good friend who makes you feel good to participate in anti-inflammatory behaviors like yoga and meditation, learn more about different holistic modalities for healing and disease prevention. Even getting away for the night and treating yourself and your partner or friend to a Westin experience of a good night's sleep and getting away from it all. Putting a pause on day-to-day life and retreating, reviving and restoring can really be a great winter pick-me-up.

What has been the response from participants so far?

The response has been overwhelmingly positive with lots of excitement.

This is the very first and only wellness-fest in our area, so many are thrilled to attend. We are limiting it to 100 participants, so there are more one-on-one, personalized wellness opportunities.

Why is it important for women to take care of their health?

Everyone should take care of their health so that they live healthy and happy lives. But for women, we do so much for others. We take care of others before we tend to our own needs. Underlying inflammation caused by daily ongoing stress, busyness of life, trauma, taking care of others and neglecting of our bodies, our minds can wreak havoc on our system, so it's crucial to take time out to breathe, be still and connect to others so that you can restore a relative balance not only deep within our cells but in our daily routines.

Most health conditions affect both men and women in varying degrees and conditions. However, women need to be aware of setting boundaries and giving more to themselves so they can minimize and hopefully prevent chronic illness caused by prolonged inflammation. It's not selfish to do so and understanding that we have a different hormonal makeup that can present different challenges is crucial for preventing chronic illness.

Proceeds From Gala Benefit CASA And Others

Board members, volunteers and the staff of CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates) recently gathered to accept a donation from Severna Town Club representatives. CASA, as the major beneficiary of proceeds from STC's 2019 Holly Ball, received nearly $17,000, enabling the organization to expand its volunteer training program, which advocates for children in the foster care system in Anne Arundel County. The women's club also gave smaller grants to several other local nonprofits, including the Boys and Girls Club, Hope for All, Charting Careers, Seeds 4 Success and the YWCA Weinberg House.

State Of The Magothy Set For March 27

The annual State of the Magothy presentation on the water quality of the Magothy River is set for March 27 at Anne Arundel Community College. Guest speaker Chris Phipps of the Anne Arundel County Department of Public Works will discuss sewer lines.

According to Magothy River Association President Paul Spadaro, Phipps will talk about converting systems for people on septic to sewer. "A lot of homes in the Magothy are still on septic," Spadaro said. Also, the Magothy River Association will talk about new Native American discoveries and their relationship to the Magothy.

This year's water quality grade is around 39 C, the closest in recent years to a 40-grade C rating. Last year it was at 30, and it has been over a decade since it has exceeded a 40-grade C rating.

"We've had a really substantial jump in underwater grasses this year," Spadaro said.

When asked what he attributes that to, he said, "The mussels played a major role, and the clarity is slightly better."

He also said that many stations along the Magothy are improving, except for Cattail Creek. Spadaro applauded the Berrywood community for a restoration project completed by residents, but more needs to be done, he said.

"We can't think a project that is 300 feet is going to fix something that is 2.5 miles long," he said. "Cattail Creek runs through an area with commercial development and by schools. It has a huge influx of heavier-than-normal pollution."

Still, there are signs of hope. A Berrywood neighbor caught a yellow perch from the end of his pier in late February.

In other news, the Magothy River Association is also working on a trivia game, which Spadaro compared to Chutes and Ladders.

"It's an outline of the Magothy, but the chute part is [replaced by] these ferry crossings," he said. "I'm hoping families could use it if they're anchored out on the river. The answers are easily given, they're multiple choice, and it's an interesting mix of history and science."

tech rehearsals. "I think that the most interesting, and honestly mind-boggling, behind-the-scenes aspect of Rock 'N' Roll is how quickly it comes together," she said. "Despite starting to rehearse in January, our first attempt at piecing together the show that audiences will eventually see happens in early March."

Because of this, student director Rebecca White admits that rehearsals for the production can get a little hectic at times, but are "overall, so much fun!" White said that the process starts out small, with little rehearsals and set designs.

"Then we move to build days and costume fittings, and then, all of a sudden, it snowballs into a show-ready performance!"

The collective answer when asked what the audience should look most forward to in this year's

"True Colors" production, other than the intricate set built by students of the tech crew, is the student band. Made up of 11 students, the band plays all but one song of this 40-number show. Student band leader Peter Cope spoke on behalf of this year's band, saying that "the band jam is our moment to shine!"

"Every band member takes a turn improvising as they are introduced to the audience," added Cope. "It's the most fun song for us to perform, and it's a really exhilarating song this year."

From the performers to the band members to the tech crew, every aspect of Severna Park High School's Rock 'N' Roll Revival XXXI: True Colors production will be filled to the brim with talent.

St. Jude Zumbathon Just Keeps On Moving

Annual Fundraiser Set For March 21

By Zach Sparks
zach@pasadenavoices.com

For the eighth year, people will shuffle their feet, gyrate their hips and move to the groove as they raise money for families affected by childhood cancer. The St. Jude Zumbathon is coming to the Severna Park Community Center on March 21 from 2:00pm-4:00pm.

Over the years, the event has raised $83,000. Event organizer Natalie Haskell hopes this year's Zumbathon brings that total to $100,000.

"These events are critical to St. Jude because they help raise awareness and funds to this incredible cause," Haskell said. "St. Jude operates mostly on donations. These donations help the families to never receive a bill for treatment, housing, travel or food."

This year's event promises more than Zumba. A children's performance, vendors, a DJ and more are part of the fun.

"In addition to our normal raffles and door prizes, we will have a section where people can purchase a raffle ticket — one ticket for $10, two tickets for $15, or three tickets for $25," Haskell said. "Those who purchase these tickets are guaranteed a prize based on the number of tickets that they purchase."

To learn more, find the "MD 8th Annual St. Jude Zumbathon" Facebook page or look for the Maryland/North Carolina donation link at www.fundraising.stjude.org.

"There are going to be many amazing raffle prizes, gifts baskets, a party bus raffle for four hours, and a party host to help plan your next party for four hours, valued at $180," Haskell said. "[We'll also have] massages, facials and an array of gift certificates."

NEIGHBORHOOD OF THE MONTH

One Of Severna Park's Oldest Communities, West Severna Park Continues To Thrive

By Judy Tacyn

Located in the area at the intersection of Benfield Boulevard and Evergreen Road, West Severna Park truly is at the heart of it all. There are approximately 238 homes, most of which were built in the 1950s and 1960s. The community has a beautiful beach with a playground and cabana, a marina with a ramp and boat storage, and is an easy walk to the Severn River Swim Club and Evergreen pool. Kinder Farm Park is a short hike up the B&A Trail, and downtown Severna Park is just a short walk or bike ride away.

The community cabana can be reserved for parties, and includes a long pier for fishing, a kayak rack, big sandy beach with a playground, and swimming pier. It is one of the few, maybe only, beaches with indoor plumbing and an outdoor shower.

The West Severna Park residents host several events, including Oktoberfest, a luau, newcomers key exchange, cleanup days at the marina and beach, fishing derby, and an active moms group and senior group.

Located directly across from the new Severna Park High School, children in this neighborhood attend Severna Park Elementary, Severna Park Middle and Severna Park High schools

ED KNEBEL
RESIDENT FOR 24 YEARS

Ed Knebel's family was planning a move in 1996, so they asked everyone they knew for suggestions. A coworker mentioned that he loved West Severna Park because of the sense of community, water privileges and the schools.

"The schools helped [with our decision]," said Knebel, "but I really fell in love with the marina. This is a very friendly community, with amenities that bring people together."

Knebel said when he gets asked about West Severna Park, he recommends the community for its easy access to locally owned restaurants and businesses.

"The amenities here are a great way to build relationships with neighbors," said Knebel, adding that volunteering with neighbors and attending community events is a great way to get to know people.

"Many times over the years I have witnessed the community supporting each other, mostly with food support, but even with dog walking and dog play dates," Knebel added. "We have personally received support from the community on several occasions, and were overwhelmed with the magnitude of generosity. We are grateful to live in such a caring community."

Ed has volunteered as the community's marina chairman since 1999.

SCOTT AND MARY SCHANER
RESIDENTS FOR 20 YEARS

Scott Schaner graduated from Severna Park; his wife, Mary, graduated from Andover High School. When it was time to put down their family's roots, they chose West Severna Park.

"Mary and I were looking for a neighborhood with great schools and water amenity access. We lived in Pasadena and decided that once we had children, we would either send them to private school or just spend the same money on a house in Severna Park."

All four Schaner children attended Severna Park schools. Their youngest will graduate from Severna Park High School this May and study nursing at Towson University. Their two oldest children are a teacher in Anne Arundel County Public Schools, and a naval officer who recently earned an engineering degree. Their fourth child is in college now.

"West Severna Park is a very active community with amazing volunteers," said Scott. "Our community is 100% volunteer and there is a ton of work! It is incredible to see how much work our members volunteer for, but they do it because it is the culture of our community."

Scott credits his neighbors as being the best part of living in West Severna Park, and estimates that there are about 50 active community members serving as officers or members of committees, or simply doing things that help without recognition.

"Just recently, the Sullivans organized an annual Souper Bowl that collects pantry items for SPAN, a local food bank, on Super Bowl Sunday," noted Scott. "One of our residents, Charlie Phelps, who just turned 100 years old, volunteers his time regularly cleaning up tree debris and other items at our community beach. Charlie seeks no recognition, but I think he is the embodiment of a WSP resident."

If Scott had to narrow down the best aspects of West Severna Park, he'd say first, that the community loves to have a great party, so there are lots of them, and second, is the very active volunteer mindset.

"Our neighbors, the Trentlys, are original homeowners, so I got to hear the stories about Severna Park back when Benfield was a dirt road and that the high school was originally very small," added Scott. "Our adjacent neighbors are all very nice and vary in family size. I walk my dog daily and it is always just nice to see my neighbors as we are out."

Scott was the community beach maintenance chairman for a few years and also served as community president for five years. Currently, he's on the board of directors. Mary organizes a showcase of homes for neighbors who had home improvements and want to share ideas with neighbors.

DAN & KATIE MILLS
RESIDENT FOR 5 YEARS

Dan, Katie, Ashley and Noah Mills moved to West Severna Park from Canton in Baltimore City in 2015. Katie Mills is a Linstead native and a Severna Park High School graduate.

The Mills children attend Severna Park Elementary School, and Dan and Katie say the family could not be happier.

"We absolutely love the school! Amazing teachers and staff who organize fun activities including a spring fair, ice cream social, plays and musicals, a variety show, and more," said Dan. "When our oldest child, a girl, started kindergarten, there were at least 13 other West Severna Park girls in kindergarten at Severna Park Elementary School!"

Katie isn't the only one who wanted to move "back" to Severna Park.

"When we moved here in 2015, we met so many kind people, many of whom have lived here for a long time, but also folks like us who wanted to move back to Severna Park once we had kids," added Dan. "To us, the residents are what make West Severna Park so special. The amenities are great, but it's our neighbors who make it where we want to live in for a long time."

Dan serves on the community board, and Katie and Dan both volunteer at the elementary school on a weekly basis. The whole family helps out with beach cleanups and, and Katie is in the community moms club.

Henry is a 40-year-old lifelong Anne Arundel County resident who had been working two jobs and making minimum wage at both. Although he and his wife didn't have any savings, they managed to make ends meet. Recently Henry began experiencing headaches, blurry vision and fatigue. He was unable to keep up with one of his jobs stocking merchandise at a home center because he became unable to do the strenuous lifting. He was let go.

A short while later, Henry was diagnosed with type 2 diabetes. The good news was that he had an answer to his symptoms, but the bad news was that his insulin was going to cost him over $300 a month, money he did not have. Henry was proud and made it clear he had never asked for help before, but he was afraid he would die if he didn't get his medicine. At SPAN, we loaded him up with food so that he could use the money he would have spent on food on his medicine instead. We were also able to pay Park Pharmacy for enough of his insulin to hold him over for the better part of a month.

Henry is looking into other employment and hopes to land a full-time job that offers insurance with a prescription plan. We were happy we could at least ease his burden during this stressful period of his life.

All of our clients have unique stories, but they have one thing in common: an emergency left them with no other choice but to seek assistance. It doesn't matter that we live in an affluent area — emergencies still happen, and they don't happen only to low-income families. In fact, the more affluent a family is, the more difficult it is if the breadwinner loses employment, because the bills are higher.

SPAN has been blessed with extremely generous donors. Presently, our food pantry is full, and our greatest need is financial.

You can donate easily on our website at www.spanhelps.org, and your donation is tax-exempt. Assistance goes directly to the service providers, not to the clients.

I also want to thank the Good Neighbors Group for organizing another successful Souper Bowl neighborhood food drive. More than 4,500 items were donated this year by 26 local neighborhoods.

Don't forget to vote for SPAN for Best Nonprofit in the Severna Park Voice's Best of Severna Park readers' poll! You can even vote online at www.severnaparkvoice.com.

A Child Custody Statute For Maryland?

David Diggs
The Law Offices of
David V. Diggs

A child custody statute may be coming to Maryland. Recent legislative sessions have seen the introduction of bills that would make joint custody and/or shared parenting the presumptive custodial arrangement. Every year, these bills are defeated, as unnecessary intrusions upon judicial discretion, leaving Maryland in the minority of states with no statute or case law creating a presumption favoring shared parenting.

For many legislators, this annual rite has highlighted the absence of a custody statute in Maryland. In the past, bills sponsored by family law practitioners, including Delegate Kathleen Dumais (Democrat, District 15, Montgomery County), have recited the guiding principle that “the best interest of the child shall be the primary consideration” in any custody litigation. Beyond this familiar starting point of best interests, the bill would serve to codify and streamline custody case law. It defines physical custody as “a child’s living arrangements.” Legal custody is defined as “the right and obligation to make long-range decisions involving education, religious training, discipline, medical care, and other matters of major significance concerning the child’s life and welfare.” This provision serves as a useful clarification because, in many instances, “legal custody” is a vague concept that often means whatever the court says it means.

With the guidance provided by a new statute, the trial court would still retain broad authority to craft a custody order suitable to each individual case. Legal custody could “be joint, sole, or any other arrangement the court may determine is in the best interest of the child.” Likewise, physical custody “may be any timesharing arrangement the court may determine is in the best interest of the child.” Family law attorneys agree that a statute would be useful in codifying in one place the countless cases that make up custody law now. This would also lend predictability to these cases, making them easier to settle and thereby less time-consuming and expensive.

In past sessions, proposed statutes have drawn inspiration from Montgomery County v. Sanders, the seminal case setting forth those factors that a court must consider when ruling on custody. Past bills have expanded upon Montgomery County v. Sanders and added to that case’s 10 factors other relevant considerations found elsewhere in the case law, including:

- The capacity of the parents to communicate and to reach shared decisions affecting the child’s welfare
- The relationship established between the child and each parent
- The demands of parental employment
- The sincerity of a parent’s request
- The benefit to the parents where such benefit will likely result in a benefit to the child
- The age, sex and health of the child, except that any such consideration shall not, in and of itself, be a conclusive consideration
- The number of children each parent has in the household

- Any history of domestic violence between the parties or by a party and a child
- Any other consideration the court determines is relevant to the best interest of the child

In determining physical custody, the court would also be directed to consider “geographic proximity ... the potential disruption of the child’s social and school life ... and any impact on state or federal assistance.” Impermissible factors include race, ethnicity, gender and the religion of either the parent or child. Extramarital sexual conduct and sexual orientation are not to be considered, “except upon a showing of harm to the child.” The parents’ relative financial situations are to be considered only to the extent “the combined financial resources of the parents set practical limits on the custodial arrangements.”

The proposed statute serves family law practitioners and children well by codifying custody law that is scattered among the appellate decisions of generations. It would foster uniformity and predictability, while still leaving to the trial judge ample discretion to fashion the best resolution for each family.

Finally, if you or a loved one has questions about custody, you should consult with an attorney who is familiar with this area of the law and who will assist you in making informed decisions.

Myths About Estate Planning

Tara Frame
Managing Partner
Frame & Frame

Many people have misconceptions about the need for, or costs of, estate planning. Some individuals think that unless you are wealthy, a will is all that is needed. But if you have children, especially young children, a trust may be a much better option to cover your needs. If you have a house, boat or other assets, it’s important to ensure they are handled according to your wishes, and in the best manner to minimize tax implications. All of these factors can greatly impact you, in the event of your incapacitation, and your family, in the event of your death. Take the quiz below to determine how much you know and check your answers below.

“If I have a will, I will avoid the probate process, right?”

False. A last will and testament will not help you avoid the probate process. A will actually guarantees probate! A last will and testament only informs the probate court how you wish to have your assets distributed upon your death.

“I can handle a decedent’s estate because I am the power of attorney.”

False. A power of attorney is a document that applies only while a person is living. After that person passes away, the power of attorney and your authority ceases to exist. A power of attorney dies with the person. If you continue taking actions after a person passes away, you could become legally liable for actions taken.

“I heard a revocable trust protects my assets from the nursing home. Is that true?”

False. A revocable trust will not give you protection from the costs of nursing home care. A slightly different trust, called an irrevocable trust, can offer such protections, but it comes with a number of factors worth considering if you want to see if such a tool is right for you. There are certainly other reasons to consider a revocable trust, but nursing home care protection is not one of them.

“I do not need to have a trust because I am not wealthy.”

False. Wealth has little to do with whether you would benefit from a trust or not. It is more important to evaluate whether the efficiencies of avoiding the probate process and avoiding potential conflict and time for your heirs justifies the creation of a trust. Additionally, trusts can protect assets for minor children, special needs children, and family members who may have substance abuse issues, as well as general protection from your children’s divorce, bankruptcy and creditors.

“I can use online resources to set up a trust or will.”

While almost anything can be obtained online in today’s technologically advanced world, there are a few areas where this is particularly unwise. Using templated documents for your will or trust is not a one-size-fits-all approach and could actually cause more harm than good. It is wiser to discuss your particular situation with an experienced estate planning attorney to determine the best options for you and your family. The costs to set up and file a will or trust are about the same as a weekend getaway and will potentially save your family a lot of pain and frustration when faced with the grief of your death. They will be glad you took the time to think through these processes with the help of an advisor. That advisor will also be there to help them should any questions or issues arise.

POLITICS & OPINION

Preventing Crisis Among Our Youth

Sid Saab

Delegate
District 33

When I last wrote in the Severna Park Voice, I shared some recommendations and concerns of the Kirwan Commission's Blueprint for Education. I said that I have consistently supported innovative programs in schools that will challenge students, broaden their horizons and reach at-risk students to keep them engaged, safe and attending school through graduation.

During school, each teacher has so many challenges to teach the material, maintain order in the classroom, engage every student, help them find their passion and excel in classwork. We cannot expect them to also be clinicians or social workers or addiction specialists. If a student is distracted by a disruptive home life, drama from older siblings, or if their parents are not healthy or engaged, these factors can lead to behavioral problems, which are best dealt with early.

To that end, I have introduced House Bill 535, an innovative three-year pilot program for three to four middle or elementary schools in Anne Arundel County. This Preventive Measure Unit pilot program is designed to build on the success of the existing Crisis Response System (CRS) by adding a team member to each participating school for the full class day. The pilot seeks to help youth who are identified by behaviors early in their life to prevent them from developing into crisis situations. The program would assist with minimizing suspensions and juvenile citations while increasing the youth's school attendance and performance.

Students may be identified by the school administration or school resource officers (SROs) as vulnerable or at-risk youth and are referred to a crisis intervention team (CIT). This team will consist of a licensed mental health professional (which may be an addiction specialist, psychologist or counselor, to name a few), a specially trained Anne Arundel County police officer and a care coordinator. The officers are trained in "Mental Health, First Aid and Crisis Intervention," a 40-hour class. The CIT can assess, stabilize and connect youth and their families to community-based services and engage the individual and the family to build rapport and address a myriad of trauma-related issues in order to prevent crisis occurrence.

Why pilot the program even in an elementary school? After many conversations with teachers, clinicians and mental health professionals, it became clear to me that early intervention for struggling kids is key. For that reason, we amended the bill to include an elementary school. Reviewing the data from crisis center calls shows that the age of youth in crisis is getting younger. This is alarming to me.

We want to keep students in their schools and in their classrooms while they are getting needed help, rather than isolating and sending them out of the classroom only to return a day or two later without addressing the problem. And, if possible, we don't want to remove students from their local school to another school that deals with behavioral and mental issues.

I emphasize that this program is 100% voluntary for students and their families. Our goal is to prevent crisis through intervention and access to treatment.

House Bill 535 was heard in the House Ways and Means Committee on February 19. It is now awaiting further committee action.

As always, your thoughts are appreciated. I can be reached at 410-841-3551 or sid.saab@house.state.md.us.

The FY2021 BOE Budget

Dana Schallheim

Board of Education
District 5

The Board of Education budget meeting on February 19 was a marathon. By 1:30am Thursday morning, both the Fiscal Year 2021 capital and operating budgets were finalized. Overall, I am pleased with what we collectively put together.

I fought for well-thought-out and carefully targeted reductions in spending presented by my colleague, because I deeply care about how our taxpayer dollars are spent. Unfortunately, my colleagues didn't agree and both measured attempts to control spending — as well as a more realistic budget for teaching positions — failed. Although few were successful, I also voted on cuts during last year's budget and will again in the future to ensure our precious and limited resources are focused on our students and limit, as much as possible, bloat in other categories.

For a second year running, this board recognized the importance of properly compensating our teachers who have the awesome task of educating our students. The Board of Education included an additional equivalent of a 1% cost of living increase (COLA) to all employees in addition to Dr. George Arlotto's compensation recommendation. These extra funds, while still subject to approval by both the county executive and county council, as well as negotiations with the teacher's union, can be used to address mutually agreed upon priorities including rectifying longstanding pay inequities.

One possible use of the funds is the restoration of docked experience steps. Since FY2010 and until this academic year, teachers were docked one to three years of experience upon hiring as a way to create equity between new hires and veteran employees whose steps were frozen during the economic downturn. Now that those lean economic times are behind us, it's important to consider restoring these steps before these teachers, and all their experience, leave for better-paying jobs in nearby counties. We all know that retention costs less than recruitment, and paying teachers in accordance with their experience should be a part of our retention strategy.

Amendments passed by the Board of Education included additional school counselors, special education staff, community ambassadors, bilingual facilitators, bilingual teaching assistants, and college and career counselors for three challenged high schools.

The budget is now in the hands of County Executive Stuart Pittman, who will announce his countywide budget on May 1. From there, the budget will be reviewed and potentially amended by the county council, whose members will strike the county FY2021 budget by June 15. During its review process, the county council will hold budget hearings on May 7 at 7:00pm at North County High School and on May 11 at 7:00pm at the Arundel Center. Please contact County Executive Pittman and the county council, attend these hearings, and advocate for our schools.

Council Update

Amanda Fiedler

Councilwoman
District 5

In 2017 and 2018, I spent most of my evenings and weekends in communities, meeting constituents at their doors. It was an opportunity for you, the voter, to learn about me. More importantly, it gave me an opportunity to understand the issues that concerned you and your community. Time has passed, but those concerns are still at the forefront of my mind. So too are my commitments that I made, especially when it comes to spending your hard-earned tax dollars. I make no bones about it. I am a fiscal conservative.

It alarms me to hear what is happening across the street from council chambers in Annapolis. The halls have been abuzz with terms like "progressive tax," "service tax" and "historic tax increases." Bills have been introduced and are making their way through committees, the delegation and senate chambers. Let us not forget that Anne Arundel County residents are still adjusting to the "historic" tax increase under County Executive Stuart Pittman in 2019, an increase I did not support. The more that government reaches into your wallet, the more you have to adjust your family budget. Families will limit how much they invest in our locally owned businesses. Individuals will cut back on visiting their favorite local mom-and-pop store, in favor of the more affordable online option.

"Historic" tax increases mean "historic" losses for small business, and those businesses are the backbone of our local economy. This is the reality of what we are facing. As a member of the county council, I cannot vote on state legislation, but tax increases and reckless fees come before the council as well. In February, the county council passed bills 88-19 and 89-19. These bills, also known as the "short-term rental" bills, impose a hotel tax to anyone who rents their primary residence and/or second home on a hosting platform such as VRBO or Airbnb, and requires a registration with a $400 fee, respectively. Short-term rental owners range from the retiree who is sharing their home to supplement a fixed income, to someone who has a second home that is used primarily as a short-term rental, and everything in between.

Because of our proximity to Annapolis, the fifth district has many homeowners who use their home as a short-term rental on only one or two annual occasions. The most prominent of these occasions is Commissioning Week. It is unreasonable to me that someone who opens their home to support Navy families could now have to pay a $400 fee to register their home. This will deter families from participating in a decades-long tradition of supporting our only military academy in the county. While I believe we need to protect the integrity of our existing communities as this industry evolves, I could not support a bill that hurts local families.

I will continue to take this fiscal conservative approach as we move through the Fiscal Year 2021 budget process that begins with the county executive's budget presentation on May 1, 2020.

There are other key issues ahead in 2020 for the council, including the General Development Plan (GDP). The GDP will guide land use for the next 20 years in our county. Currently, the Office of Planning and Zoning is reviewing land use change applications that have been submitted for specific parcels all over the county. There will be an opportunity for public comment on those applications during town halls in the spring and summer. The Department of Planning and Zoning will then formulate recommendations on each of these applications and present those recommendations to the county council within the GDP in September 2020. It is important to know that the recommendations for land use changes are a step in the process. I encourage you to visit www.aacounty.org/departments/planning-and-zoning and click on "Anne Arundel 2040" to understand the entire process.

At the council's February 18 meeting, Bill 6-20 passed unanimously. Bill 6-20 adds a permitted use in certain residential areas, for watermen in existence since January 1, 1990. Council chambers were full of watermen who came to testify about the heritage of what they do, and explained that it is their livelihood. The council came together to support small business.

I take the commitments I made very seriously. Please remain engaged, in our county legislation and the budget process. Your voice is important to me.

Last Chance To End Gerrymandering

Michael Malone

Delegate
District 33

I received special valentine cards the morning of February 14, but they weren't from my wife. The valentines received that morning at my General Assembly desk from the governor and the League of Women Voters had notes like "just as fine as a fairly drawn district line" and "roses are red, violets are blue, together let's ensure voters' votes remain true." All sweetness aside, with the decennial U.S. Census beginning next month, and that data soon being used to redraw congressional and state legislative district lines, Maryland's ongoing gerrymandering is hard to swallow.

Last year's Supreme Court Benisek v. Lamone decision squarely placed redistricting reform in the hands of individual states. Change must happen here. The Maryland Constitution requires that state legislative lines be drawn so that each district would be "of adjoining territory, be compact in form, and be of substantially equal population," with due regard given to "natural boundaries and the boundaries of political subdivisions." This, however, does not apply to Maryland's congressional districts. If Maryland's Constitution applied the same standards to both state and congressional districts, Maryland's current congressional district lines would be unconstitutional under Maryland law. In 2002, Maryland's highest court applied these same Maryland Constitutional standards to invalidate gerrymandered state districts in response to 15 petitions challenging the map prepared by Governor Parris Glendening and the General Assembly. In any event, gerrymandering reform in Maryland requires amending Maryland's Constitution, so any reform passed by the General Assembly would then be placed on the ballot to be ratified by the people.

This year, I've again introduced anti-gerrymandering legislation: House Bills 1460, 1491 and 1495. HB 1491 is the same bill I proposed last year, which would require that our requirements for state legislative boundaries be extended to congressional boundaries. It is a bipartisan effort and has 65 co-sponsors. HB 1495 would require that state legislative districts be drawn without accounting for how people are registered to vote, how they have voted in the past, or their political party, in accordance with Maryland District Court ruling in Benisek v. Lamone. HB 1460 would impose those same requirements on the redrawing of congressional districts.

Governor Hogan has introduced anti-gerrymandering legislation for the fifth year, this time as the Redistricting Reform Act of 2020. The Redistricting Reform Act of 2020, which I've co-sponsored, is two-pronged. House Bill 341, cross-filed as Senate Bill 266, is aimed at congressional redistricting. If enacted, HB 341 provides for Maryland's congressional and state legislative districts to be drawn by an independent commission, rather than our rather partisan General Assembly. Each legislative district would be drawn to be geographically compact and to respect communities and natural boundaries, without regard to how individuals are registered to vote or their actual voting patterns and without regard for incumbents or potential political candidates. House Bill 346, cross-filed as Senate Bill 284, would take effect upon ratification of HB 341 and provides the structure needed to implement it. HB 346 would create a nine-member commission of three Democrats, three Republicans and three independents who are not political insiders. The commission would conduct public hearings in a transparent process before drawing a redistricting plan and submitting it to the General Assembly for ratification.

Redistricting reform bills were heard before the House Rules and Executive Nominations Committee on March 2. A vote has yet to occur on the bills. Now is the time to end GerryMaryland.

The Steaming Reality About Vaping

Ed Reilly

State Senator
District 33

Approximately six years ago, members of my staff had questions and concerns about the new e-cigarette or vaping industry, so they visited a small vape shop in Severna Park. They talked to the owner about how one "vapes," the devices that are available for vaping, and the cartridges that are available for purchase for the devices. They were told that vaping was such an excellent step down from cigarettes and nicotine addiction. Concerns were raised about the product not having any federal approval, but the shop owner didn't feel their product needed federal approval. That was then, before the massive growth in the vaping market, the development of the disposable vaping devices, and severe illness and deaths attributed to vaping.

Today, more than 8,400 retailers in Maryland are licensed to sell tobacco products, including products used for vaping. It has become a known fact that vaping products are highly addictive and contain nicotine salts, which make the flavors more palatable. Unfortunately, the targeted audience has become teenagers and young adults; products are specially flavored to appeal to them. There are more than 15,500 flavors including fruit, candy and dessert flavors.

As the industry has developed, so has the marketing of disposable vaping devices. JUUL is one manufacturer of these devices. These disposable devices are found wherever tobacco products are sold. This has made their purchase incredibly easy for minors at local convenience stores. It's common knowledge that students will vape at school, in the lunchroom, in classrooms, and during instruction time. Bathrooms are even called "vaping lounges." The disposable vaping device is small and easily hidden, and there is no smoke, but a vapor so they are not easily detected. I did support the successful effort to raise the sale of these products to people over the age of 21 years old.

In January, the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) acted on the unregulated marketing of vaping products and placed a partial federal ban on all flavored nicotine vaping products that use a cartridge system. Menthol and tobacco flavor cartridges were not included in this ban. However, the federal government did not ban disposable devices.

On February 6, Maryland Comptroller Peter Franchot announced that he would use his authority as the state's chief tobacco regulator to immediately ban the sale of disposable flavored e-cigarette devices in Maryland. This closes the loophole created by the FDA that did not address the disposable devices. Agents from the comptroller's Field Enforcement Division, along with local health departments, will inspect retailers across the state to make sure the product is no longer for sale and is off the retail shelves. In mid-February, the comptroller's vaping task force came up with several recommendations pertaining to vaping rules and regulations. They covered everything from banning online sales to permitting vape shop vendors to sell only to patrons over 21 years of age. They also recommended that retailers have ID scanning technology to make sure the person was actually 21 years old or older. Tougher punishments would be established for "straw buyers." These are adults that go in and buy the product with intent to sell or give to a minor.

There are currently several pieces of legislation in the Maryland state legislature. One will totally ban all flavored tobacco and nicotine vaping products. Public safety representatives are concerned that this would create a huge black market supplied by out-of-state products. If this bill becomes law, any action done by the comptroller's office is complementary to legislation.

If you have any comments on this issue or others, contact me at edward.reilly@senate.state.md.us, or call my office at 410-841-3568.

Houck's Menswear Finds Perfect Fit In Cape St. Claire

Larry Houck takes pride in offering affordable American-made clothing at Houck's Menswear in Cape St. Claire.

By Zach Sparks

In the age of big-box stores and online retailers, the brick-and-mortar shop Houck's Menswear has prospered without a huge Internet presence, instead relying on great customer service and bargain prices.

"Americans are often fooled because they're not shopping, they're buying," said owner Larry Houck. "Here, I have that customer service like the old days. People can come in, feel the clothing and try it on."

Houck opened his Cape St. Claire shop in 2016 after one year in Centerville and more than three years in Chestertown, Maryland.

"This location has parking and is in the center of quite a few people," he said of the Cape St. Claire shopping center. "The community here is young and diverse."

When Houck was young, he didn't know he would eventually be in the menswear business. He originally had aspirations of being a lawyer. Soon after graduating from the University of Maryland in 1979, the Glen Burnie

High School alum was hired to sell clothes at Phillips Men's Shop in Laurel, Delaware.

Houck realized that career suited him better, although he took a round-about journey to get there. He spent time in Palm Beach, Florida, and then 20 years in the fulfillment business before opening his own menswear store.

"Moving product around intrigues me, and I like being with the public," he said.

Houck's Menswear carries suits, jackets, pants, shirts, hats, gloves and an array of other apparel.

"My theme is business casual," Houck said. "The suits and sports coats are only for funerals and weddings."

He also offers tuxedos for students to rent during prom season, a service used by teens from Severna Park and Broadneck high schools, as well as St. Mary's and Archbishop Spalding.

From Bills Khakis to Schott NYC, the brands at Houck's all sell American-made clothing.

Goska's Liquors Celebrates Nine Decades Of Service

Located in a red house on Leelyn Drive, Goska's Liquors is older than most people who live in Severna Park. The business just turned 90 years old.

Goska's wasn't always a liquor store. When brothers Walter and Alex Goska bought the building from the Kleiss family in 1930, it was a general store.

"We had gas pumps, ice house, feed house, they did butcher — basically everything from A to Z, from candles to canned goods to etc.," explained Kevin Sosnoski, who runs the store. "So it's really been a business that's changed over the years to what it is now."

In 1933, the repeal of Prohibition meant that the Goska brothers could start selling beer and liquor. Long-forgotten brands such as Gunther and American were the beers of choice.

As Severna Park developed over the years, Goska's continued business, despite the advent of large grocery stores that displaced many small general stores. When Walter Goska died in the 1950s, his wife, Helen, continued to run the shop with the help of her sister, Eva.

Kevin's father, Walter Sosnoski, nephew to Helen and Eva, relocated to Severna Park from Arbutus and helped run the store. Walter was the one who helped solidify the store's place in the community, according to the history provided on the Goska's website.

"Walter always greeted and thanked every customer that walked in the door," it recalls. "His appreciation for every customer was genuine and it was his practices that set the standard for Goska's renowned service."

As a third-generation owner and a resident of Severna Park, Kevin Sosnoski recognizes the importance of being a community-oriented business leader.

"We make you feel welcome when you walk in the door," he said. "We help you along the line with your purchase if you have any questions. I have an extremely knowledgeable, friendly staff."

Over the years, the staff included Kevin's recently retired brother, Michael; mom, Emilie; sister, Carol; Michael's wife, Debbie Sosnoski; and Kevin's brother-in-law, Tom Mullen.

Recognizing the importance of reinvesting dollars in the community, Goska's Liquors supports local organizations and charities throughout the year. Some groups that the store has supported are Providence

Center, SPAN, the VFW, the Elks club and Green Hornets.

Goska's Liquors is located at 501 Leelyn Drive in Severna Park and is open Monday through Saturday from 7:00am to 8:00pm and Sunday from 8:00am to 6:00pm. For more information, visit www.goskas.com or call 410-647-4041.

"It's something that should be celebrated," Sosnoski said of the 90-year milestone. "It doesn't happen very often."

A Retirement Parable

Jason LaBarge
NSSA Managing Partner
Premier Planning Group

John's struggling to steer his boat toward shore. He can see the shoreline, but wind and rain are slapping his face with cold water from the bay. The water's choppy and waves are spilling over the bow of his boat. He'd checked the forecast just before setting out to cross the Chesapeake Bay, but this storm had come out of nowhere!

He looked over and saw his friend, Tony, was struggling as well. The storm was rocking his boat just as much, but as he watched, John noticed his friend has started to change course. Tony was now headed toward the peninsula to his right, a shorter distance than the shoreline straight ahead.

John was perplexed; he'd carefully planned for this trip for years. He and Tony had decided they'd take an epic trip crossing the Chesapeake Bay on their own; each man in his own boat. After much research, John decided he'd cross in a sailboat and Tony chose a rowboat.

As the chosen date approached, both men carefully analyzed the weather forecast and John felt confident that he'd have the tailwinds needed to propel him forward and make it to his desired marina. Unfortunately, after the men were well on their way across the bay, the weather had unexpectedly changed and now John had only one choice: he'd need to wait out the storm and hope that once it subsided he wouldn't be too far from his goal.

WHAT DOES THIS PARABLE HAVE TO DO WITH RETIREMENT PLANNING?

If you're planning to take an epic trip called retirement, what should your planning look like? What strategies will you use when investing for your future?

With investing, there are a variety of strategies you can take. Broadly speaking, there are two to choose from. These two approaches I'm referring to are called passive management (the sailboat strategy) or active management (the rowboat strategy).

THE SAILBOAT STRATEGY VERSUS THE ROWBOAT STRATEGY

Passive management, the sailboat strategy, is a way to invest your portfolio that includes setting your sail and taking advantage of the tailwinds to get to your destination. You will coast quickly along toward your destination without much effort on your part, however, should an unexpected storm arise, you must stay in the boat and ride out the storm, no matter the severity.

Active management, the rowboat strategy, is a way to invest that allows you to change your strategy based on the conditions around you. It can notice the incoming storm and indicate that

What Can Investors Expect In 2020?

Brian M. Conrad, CFP
Financial Advisor
Edward Jones

In 2019, investors enjoyed a pretty good year. The S&P 500 Index, one of the most widely used tools for measuring stock performance, was up 30% for the year, and other indexes also rose significantly. But now that we've turned the page to 2020, what can you expect from the financial markets?

First of all, keep in mind that it's always difficult to predict how investments will perform, because any number of factors — economic, political, even meteorological — can affect the markets in the short term. Nonetheless, here are four areas that could play a role in the investment world in 2020:

Consumer spending — In recent years, consumer spending has helped drive economic growth, which, in turn, has supported rising share prices over time. In 2020, the combination of low interest rates and a strong labor market may continue to support strong consumer spending. However, some possible headwinds remain, in the form of sluggishness in business investment and continued trade uncertainty between the U.S. and China, despite the recently signed partial trade deal.

Interest rates — As mentioned above, interest rates are still low, which is usually good news for investors, because low rates make it cheaper for businesses to borrow to expand their operations — and growing businesses are often attractive investment opportunities. Investors will closely follow the Federal Reserve this year for signs of where rates may be headed. Given that global interest rates are also quite low — and even negative, in some cases — it seems likely that the Fed will keep rates low for the foreseeable future, but an unexpected pickup in inflation could possibly lead to a policy reversal.

Global growth — Global growth slowed in 2019, but some factors point to the possibility of improved growth in 2020. For one thing, if we do see an improved trade relationship between the U.S. and China, it could help accelerate or increase global trade and manufacturing. Also, major central banks have been trying to boost their economies by cutting interest rates, and since there's usually a lag between rate cuts and their impact, we could see evidence in 2020 that these stimulus efforts are working.

Politics — Of course, 2020 is an election year. At this point, no one can accurately predict the outcome of either the presidential or congressional races; furthermore, it's also difficult to forecast the reaction of the financial markets to any change in political leadership. Issues such as taxes, tariffs and regulations can influence market sentiment — sometimes far in advance of their actual effect on the economy — but it's probably unwise for you to adjust your investment strategy in response to what may happen. In general, it's a good idea not to "play politics" with your portfolio.

No matter how any of the above factors play out in 2020, you'll almost certainly help yourself by following a long-term investment strategy based on your goals, risk tolerance and time horizon. Along the way, you may need to adjust your portfolio somewhat in response to external events, but you don't want to overreact to the headlines of today — or the anticipated headlines of tomorrow. Ultimately, the decisions you make will determine your success as an investor.

Houck has a patriotic spirit, and that support starts in the local community as a member of the Lions Club and the Knights of Columbus. Through silent auctions and items donated, he also supports Devine Mercy Academy, the Goshen it's an appropriate time to go in a different direction and change course, just like Tony did when he decided to row to the peninsula to get out of the storm.

Passive management uses benchmark-sensitive strategies that are primarily driven by the market. They seek to take advantage of the tailwinds of bull markets to capture investment returns. Active management is not constrained by a benchmark and you have the freedom to disconnect from the benchmark anytime you choose. Active management strives to avoid the risk in bear markets when headwinds threaten your returns. In other words, the passive management approach follows an index like the S&P, where active management strives to beat the market by predicting market trends and outcomes.

SHOULD YOU CHOOSE PASSIVE OR ACTIVE MANAGEMENT?

No matter the approach you choose, you'll have waters that are smooth and waters that are choppy as you journey toward the retirement shoreline. By and large, however, you will get to your destination. I believe that a well-constructed retirement income plan will include both strategies. This way, you can adjust your sail when needed, and you can use your oars when needed.

Generally speaking, active management of your investments is for when you're concerned about risk and want downside protection, when you have a specific investment objective (such as income), and a shorter time horizon. Passive management of your investments, on the other hand, is better used by the hands-off investor. This works best if you want the lowest possible cost (fees) and you don't believe it's possible to beat the market on a regular basis.

Neither approach is better than the other; when you find yourself in the middle of the bay on your sailboat and there is no wind, you sure would love some oars! On the other hand, any sailor will tell you the enjoyment they get from tracking the water and making decisions based on something as fickle as the wind.

THE IDEAL RETIREMENT PLAN

The ideal financial plan will have both approaches built in. No matter your net worth or position in life, you should consider your personal circumstances and how each of these strategies can help you pursue your retirement goals. If you need help, you should seek out a licensed financial advisor and speak to them about your retirement goals and how they can help you launch both boats as you prepare for your own personal trip across the bay.

The Best Of Houzz badge is awarded annually in three categories: design, customer service and photography. Design awards honor professionals whose work was the most popular among the Houzz community. Customer service honors are based on several factors, including a pro's overall rating on Houzz and client reviews submitted in 2019. Architecture and interior design photographers whose images were most popular are recognized with the photography award.

A Best Of Houzz 2020 badge will appear on win-

Hot Club of Baltimore will bring their gypsy jazz style to Severna Park when they visit Café Mezzanote on March 15.

Sunday Jazz At The Mezz

By Judy Tacyn

Jazz Beyond Borders hopes to quench a cultural thirst for world jazz performances in this part of Anne Arundel County through Sunday Jazz at the Mezz. This six-month series opened in January and will run through June at Café Mezzanote at 760 Ritchie Highway in Severna Park.

"I think there is great local curiosity about the jazz culture in the rest of the world," said Paula Anne Delve Phillips, event creator. "I feel very privileged to bring this series to my hometown area."

Phillips was a regular performer in her parents' Pasadena home even before she could take her first steps. By the time she hit double-digits, her parents were driving Phillips and her friends to not only lessons, but to experience dance and music performances in Baltimore and beyond. The artistic family loved the live performances but always wished there were more programs in Anne Arundel County. This sentiment turned out to be Phillips' life-long passion.

Phillips co-founded and served as administrative director of Maryland Summer Jazz, a festival of workshops, jams and concerts. She also served as director for inDepth Jazz Clinics, highlighting Brazilian, Latin and other world jazz and women artists, and earned awards for developing county arts programs. After decades of working with and in the arts and entertainment industry, Phillips formed The Phillips Agency, a public relations firm representing nonprofit organizations associated with arts and culture, individual performing and recording artists, and record labels.

Her latest creation, Jazz Beyond Borders, a presenting organization and artist-booking agency, was born to help venue hosts, event planners and

The Call Of The Wild: A Sterilized Remake With No Bite

By Audrey Ruppert

I was initially excited to hear "The Call of the Wild" was going to be remade yet again, with Harrison Ford; I have always been a fan of Jack London and read many of his novels when I was a child. Then I realized it was going to be a Disney movie.

For some reason, the brutal source material behind "The Call of the Wild" always seems to get the Disney treatment and always becomes a happy story about dogs. London's survivalist tale of human cruelty and kindness, set in the bitter Yukon cold, is more like "The Revenant" - with dogs - than "Lassie." London himself lived a sort of gothic tragedy. Born out of wedlock in a 19th-century slum, the young author panned unsuccessfully for gold in the arctic before skyrocketing to stardom and becoming a legend of American literature, taking his place next to greats like John Steinbeck and F. Scott Fitzgerald. He became an alcoholic and died of a likely overdose at the age of 40, shortly after his Wolf Palace mansion burnt to the ground. All this rich, profoundly interesting source material and we get CGI dogs and Harrison Ford reading contrived, corny lines. And I mean corny.

In this sterilized retelling, we see Buck, a spoilt Saint Bernard mix from a California home, kidnapped and sold as a sled dog to work in the Alaskan wilderness. Along the way, he encounters good owners (such as Harrison Ford) and bad owners (such as Dan Stevens), but eventually answers the call of the wild and lives in the wilderness with a wolfpack.

I suppose I should put my gripes about the source material aside. Disney can't exactly adapt ghastly source material; in the original "Little Mermaid," the protagonist turns into sea foam and dies, and in the original "Call of the Wild," almost everyone dies.

Well, did we at least get some charming songs sung by a Jamaican crab, or, as with more modern Disney films, a good message for kids? Vaguely. Buck learns that people can be good or bad masters, but that he

Dining Out

Wash Away Your Cravings With A Meal At Sullivan's Cove

By Mary Cobbler

It seems like everyone in Severna Park has been talking about Sullivan's Cove, the new restaurant that has taken over the space previously owned by Annapolis Seafood. My husband and I, along with our 6- and 7-year-old sons, visited the restaurant on a Wednesday night. Business was slow when we first arrived, but by the time we left, nearly all the roomy booths, wooden tables and the bar area were mostly filled up.

Sullivan's was like a cozy refuge on a freezing, drizzly evening. A fire crackled in a rustic cast-iron fireplace, inviting us into the clean, trendy atmosphere. It was classy enough for a terrific date night but relaxed enough that we felt comfortable bringing the kids.

Our waiter, Mike, quickly arrived at our table and greeted us. He was friendly and knowledgeable of the menu, able to offer us multiple spot-on recommendations for appetizers, meals and desserts. He had a great sense of humor and kept our drinks topped off throughout the evening.

Per Mike's recommendation, we opted for the crispy sprouts. Truth be told, I ordered this dish somewhat begrudgingly — on an appetizer menu filled with candied bacon, trip dip (three creamy types of dip paired with naan), and pretzel monkey bread, who really wants to order a vegetable-based appetizer? I ordered the sprouts in an effort to assuage my guilt for the carbs I would eat at dinner, but I still fretted that it would be a mistake.

The sprouts arrived quickly and steaming hot. The (nearly) guilt-free dish was filled with chargrilled, crispy Brussels sprouts and diced apples cooked in browned butter and mixed with creamy, tangy feta cheese. This ignited a flavor explosion, and large enough that — even though it's defined as a "kitchen snack" on the menu — it could have made up a whole meal for me.

My husband ordered a 1759 stout smash burger, and I went with a fancy ramen bowl from the "Large Plates" section of the menu. There were also several kinds of salads and sandwiches to choose from, along with large plates of crab cakes, rockfish, ratatouille, muscles linguine, and a few meat-based deals. Multiple vegan options were available. Both of our kids ordered burgers and fries from the kids menu.

Again, the food arrived quickly and was served hot. My ramen bowl was large, filled with flavorful broth, soft noodles, and colorful pickled vegetables. I've tried fancy ramen only a few times; I tend to associate the noodles with the stuff I ate in college when I had only a dollar in my account. This ramen was light years away from my college nightmares, however, it was full of flavor, and the noodles were dense and not at all mushy, and the pickled vegetables and split boiled egg added a dimension of texture that created a modern comfort food classic. You can choose between chicken, shrimp, beef, pork belly, or salmon; I opted for the shrimp, which were juicy and firm and just the right size to scoop up with chopsticks. It was the perfect portion size, enough to fill me up without overstuffing myself. I will note that it is a very salty dish, which, of course, brought out the flavor undertones of ginger, cilantro and sesame. If you are a salt lover, you will be satisfied with this dish; if not, it could be slightly overpowering by the time you get to the bottom of the bowl.

My husband's meal was a melt-in-your-mouth burger that exceeded the flavor, texture, temperature and size standards that I have for my burgers. The bun was buttered and grilled so that it was crispy on the outside and soft on the inside. Two grilled patties were juicy and educators connect to world-class artists, educators and vice versa.

The first two nights in the series were sold out. "We are absolutely thrilled with how well-received these performances have been," added Phillips. "It is so satisfying to see a very happy audience."

"There was live jazz in Anne Arundel County before our series, but not enough to match the interest and rarely anything between Baltimore and Annapolis," added Theresa Sise, who performed in January as the kickoff artist and who also works to organize Jazz Beyond Borders events. "It's great to bring jazz to mid-county."

Recent renovations to Café Mezzanotte provided Phillips a perfect venue for live jazz performances. A large meeting room is transformed into a 100-seat "theater" where artists perform two 50-minute sets with an intermission, between 5:00pm and 7:00pm. Café Mezzanotte opens its doors at 4:00pm for those who would like an early dinner before the performance. Guests are also treated to a meet-and-greet after the show.

When presented with the idea of the jazz series, Café Mezzanotte owner Tommie Koukoulis was onboard almost immediately. "We are thrilled to be able to feature live jazz in a setting where the music is the focus; it's not just background music."

Many of the artists have performed on expansive stages in large theaters, so they welcome the intimacy of the Café Mezz venue.

"These are international performing artists who may not often have an opportunity like this. Guests are very close to the music," added Koukoulis. "Music is art, and food is art. Live jazz is a very good fit for us and we're very happy to be able to bring it to the people of Anne Arundel County."

Noting the success of the first two sold-out performances, Koukoulis is already looking to future jazz series, perhaps even events held outdoors.

"We made some great music and the audience response fueled us on. Mezzanotte staff were helpful," said Sise of her January concert. "The circular tables and glowing fire created a feeling of warmth and intimacy despite having 100 people in the room."

The next Jazz at the Mezz performance will be Sunday, March 15, when Hot Club of Baltimore will bring their gypsy jazz style to Severna Park. Bandleader and prolific composer Michael Joseph Harris will be joined by fellow guitarist Sami Arefin, bassist Shawn Simon, and feature vocalist Alexis Tantau.

satisfying, and topped with sweet caramelized onions that made my eyes roll back in my head. The flavor was so good that I didn't even mind the raised eyebrows from fellow diners as I licked the juice off my chin. The French fries I nabbed from my kids' plates were tasty as well.

There were only a few choices for desserts, but they all looked so good. I wobbled back and forth between the "midnight snack" (made from chocolate ganache, caramel, peanut butter powder, and ice cream) and the "variations of berries" (raspberry sorbet, blackberry sponge cake, citrus meringue, and candied blueberries), but finally settled on the "cookies and cream" recommended, again, by Mike. The cookies and cream was a large, warm, salted caramel cookie cooked in a skillet and topped with creamy white chocolate ice cream. The salt added another taste dimension to the super-sweet, melted cookie, and the ice cream was indulgent. The white chocolate added another flavor surprise to a dish that exceeded the ordinary.

The whole meal, including a coffee, a soda, an appetizer, two kids meals, a burger, an entrée and a dessert, came out to a little over $75. The price tag is a little heftier than we would normally opt for on a night out with the kids, so I think that when we go back we will probably choose to do so for a date night.

A final note: this is a great place to eat if you have gluten allergies. My son, who has celiac disease, was able to eat the French fries and a burger on a gluten-free bun.

Next time you're in Severna Park, head to Sullivan's for a night of flavor and fun you won't soon forget!

Sloat's Mile Title Highlights State Meet For Severna Park T&F

Carson Sloat (center) won the 1600-meter 4A state championship on February 18, and teammates Jake Gelfand (left) and Jack Muldoon finished second and fifth, respectively.

lead a 1-2-5 finish in the event for the Falcons, as teammate Jake Gelfand was the runner-up in 4:26.52 and Jack Muldoon placed fifth in 4:27.21.

All three runners are juniors, and Sloat said they used the power of numbers in the championship race.

"I always love running with these two guys because we know how to push each other," said Sloat. "It also gives us an advantage because we can plan out strategies and control the race. And of course, they aren't only my teammates, but they're two of my best friends, and it just makes racing that much better."

Sloat said the state title was less a culmination of seeking a specific goal and more a step along his progress in the sport.

"I've always been committed to this team, since freshman year, but I wouldn't say I really began to compete at the state level until last indoor and outdoor seasons," Sloat said. "I wouldn't have even thought about gunning for a state title until this year."

Merely qualifying for and competing at the state meet is an accomplishment in itself, and Sloat, Gelfand and Muldoon were among a larger group of athletes to represent Severna Park at the state championships. Sloat also placed fourth in the 800, while Muldoon placed eighth and James Louie finished 12th.

Gelfand and James Glebocki finished fifth and 10th, respectively, in the 3200-meter run. John Tyler placed fourth in Carson Sloat didn't think about a state championship when he began running with the track and cross country teams at Severna Park High School as a freshman two-plus years ago. He just kept running and training with his friends and teammates.

It turns out that process can yield pretty good results.

On February 18, Sloat, a junior, became the latest in a string of Severna Park athletes to garner individual success in distance running when he won the 1600-meter title at the 4A state championship meet at Prince George's Sports and Learning Complex in Landover.

Sloat ran the race in 4:25.81 to win the crown in the 1600, also known as the metric mile, and

There's no better way to avenge a defeat than to come back and beat a rival in the playoffs.

Ballers Take Skills To The Court, Win Hoops Title

The Ballers won the Green Hornets club title in their first year playing basketball together.

By Colin Murphy

The Ballers are all good athletes — they've shown it on the lacrosse and soccer fields of Severna Park and beyond.

It was time to give basketball a try. The Ballers balled out on the court, too.

Severna Park's group of neophyte hoopers took to the sport enough to claim a 21-15 win in the Green Hornets seventh-/eighth-grade girls club basketball championship game at Severn School on February 21.

Keira Abere, Isabella Belotte, Francesca

Gelfand, Grace Lamon, Caroline Levin, McKenna Miller, Avery Serpa, Adalynn Smith, Alyssa Tutas, Ava Tutas and Isabella Van Gieson formed the team, which was coached by Eric Van Gieson, Chris Tutas, Christina Morganti and Chris Belotte.

"The girls have never played basketball together before this season, and most of them haven't played organized basketball ever," said Van Gieson. "They used this team as a chance to have no worries, laugh and enjoy each other's company. New friendships have formed and they now spend time together as much as they can outside of basketball."

He shared one element of the Ballers' successful first year playing basketball. "They laughed almost nonstop this season."

@c.murphy.photo

The Green Hornets boys seventh/eighth-grade club basketball championship was decided on February 21 as the Knicks defeated the Pelicans 28-17 at Severn School to win the postseason tournament.

The Knicks, who are Gannon Cope, Isaiah Green, Athan Bigelow, John Burkhardt, Evan

Campbell, Trevor Oakes, Gabe Lamberti, Jonathan Mazzola and Brady Jones, finished the season 20-0 overall. The team went 4-0 in the playoffs. Mike Mazzola coached the Knicks with Justus Burkhardt.

"I thought they played really well together, and they instinctively play really well," said coach Mazzola. "We kind of lucked out in the draft. I had no idea who half the team was, and I just drafted and got lucky. They all played their roles, and they ended up playing really well together. They had good chemistry just playing rec basketball, so they had a lot of fun, and I just let them go out there and play." View a photo gallery of this game and many others at www.severnaparkvoice.com/sports. Follow the Severna Park Voice on Instagram: @severnaparkvoice.

Hornets 9U Girls Go Unbeaten In County

Severna Park's 9U select girls went 11-0 in county play and 6-1 in the Arbutus League for a 17-1 overall mark.

By Colin Murphy
colin@severnaparkvoice.com

The Green Hornets 9U select girls basketball team finished the Anne Arundel County league season with an 11-0 record to claim the championship in the top division. The team also went 6-1 in the Arbutus Girls Travel League of fourth- and fifth-grade teams to place second. Kendall Austin, Presley Davis, Claire Farley, Ella Hartman, Brynn Houghton, Cate Gage, Caroline Mosher, Alex Murray, Finley Silk and Carly Weeks comprise the team, which was coached by Stephanie Hartman, Darby Davis and Eric Silk.

"The girls really excelled as a total team this year," said coach Hartman. "After almost every game the opposing coach would comment to me about what an unselfish group of girls we had and how impressive our passing and teamwork was for this age level. Every game, each girl contributed in some way, and it was exciting to see different players step up when we needed them to. We asked a lot of the girls in practice and in the games, and they always rose to the challenge. We continued with our defensive intensity this season, which helped us to an undefeated season in the county. Even when we played bigger and more skilled fifth-grade teams in the Arbutus league, the girls never gave up or got down on each other. I am so proud how each of them developed as basketball players this season. The future for SP hoops looks bright!"

The team of Addy Dorn, Charlotte Mazzola, Elsa Cliffe, Emme Willis, Hunter Flynn, Kate Wallace, Lily Dunlap, Lola Phippen, Marin Schaffer and Naomi Baker went 8-0-2 on the season.

The team allowed a league-low points-against (total) of 59 points allowed for the entire regular and post season."

STUDENT-ATHLETE OF THE MONTH

Peyton Sullivan — SPHS Basketball, Softball

By Colin Murphy
@c.murphy.photo

Every team needs a player whose entire mindset revolves around togetherness and inclusion.

At Severna Park, that player is Peyton Sullivan.

As a member of the Falcons' basketball and softball teams, Sullivan takes on the role of binding the team together through her words and actions.

"Togetherness and being included has been very important to me for as long as I can remember," said Sullivan, a junior. "My parents taught me the 'Golden Rule' at a young age, treat others the way you want to be treated, and I try to stick to that."

Recently, Sullivan extended her approach beyond the school and into the rest of the county as Severna Park's representative on the Student Athlete Advisory Council. Sullivan took part in a panel discussion at the AACPS Spring Coaches Professional Development meeting at Broadneck High School in which coaches and student-athletes had collaborative discourse about education in sports. Coaches were able to hear firsthand from student-athletes what is most important to them in a team or sports setting.

"It was very empowering to help these coaches with the subjects they thought they needed to work on," said Sullivan. "The specific questions I was able to answer were along the lines of techniques in unifying a team and having a personable relationship with their players."

As a committed student-athlete, Sullivan has to carve out time for her responsibilities. She is a member of the National Honors Society with a 4.31 GPA and on the Principal's Honor Roll while taking AP courses. She also is involved with multiple organizations such as One Love, Chick-Fil-A Leadership Academy and Young Life.

She received the softball team's Sportsmanship Award last season, and her head coach, Meredith McAlister, recounts that Sullivan forced her way onto the varsity team as a freshman in 2018 by her skill and athletic ability but also by her sheer eagerness, willingness and demonstrated effort.

"We were looking at a couple of freshman players who all had similar ability and we wanted someone who could run bases, who would work as a backup and just be a sponge, learning and growing with those upperclassmen," said McAlister.

On the last day of tryouts, the coaches asked the girls to run bases as part of a scrimmage. Sullivan outlasted everyone and kept coming back to first base for another round, insisting she could do it all day. "That day, our staff unanimously put Peyton on the varsity team," McAlister said.

McAlister also recounted a time when Sullivan took the initiative to bring younger players into the fold during travel team workouts.

"We were working out with our summer travel team and there were two younger girls who were playing catch on the field next to us," McAlister said. "I walked over and said, 'Hey Peyton, who is that over there?' She said, 'That's so-and-so, do you want me to go over and see if they want to work out with us?' She knew what the right thing to do was before I could even get it out of my mouth. A lot of teenagers either wouldn't have wanted to offer others to join us, would have felt too awkward to go over and offer, or would have been too lazy to run all the way over and ask. It's those simple day-to-day things that really set Peyton apart."

Sullivan expressed gratitude to her parents, brother and coach McAlister for helping her thrive in sports, and she said she keeps her guiding principles in mind when in a team setting.

"Being a teammate, to me, is not only someone you are on a team with, but someone you can go to if you need something, like built-in family," Sullivan said. "For high schools sports you see your team almost every day, so it's important to have a good relationship with them. A leader is not someone who bosses their team around. As a leader, your job is to ensure everyone feels welcome and allowed to be themselves."

Sharks Cap Successful Season

The Severna Park Green Hornet Sharks capped a sterling 17-4 season with a 17-7 win against the MD Sting on Sunday, February 23. The fifth-grade Sharks won their division of the Arbutus Sunday League. They also finished second in the Hoosier's Division of the Anne Arundel County Saturday League. The Sharks were led by centers Jordyn Raistrick and Morgan Rausch, power forwards Addy Anders and Maggie Morgan, small forwards Carys McKenzie and Sydney Pasko, shooting guards Jordyn Urban and Harper Wallace, and point guards Ruby Bauer and Anya Diggs.

Mavs Beat Jazz For Scrub League Title

» Continued from B1 first-time basketball coaches for their sons' final season of high school basketball.

Warren's basket with 26 seconds left in the game gave the Mavericks a three-point lead. Clarke, who had ended his family vacation early and driven four hours home for the game, made two foul shots with six seconds left to give the Mavericks a five-point lead.

Kennedy was the team's leading rebounder, while seniors Murphy and Trey Huber were the team's leading scorers.

Players and coaches expressed pride for the season and the bond the team shared.

"Having both my senior, Trey, and freshman, Will, on the same team was really special," said coach Huber. "I was happy to be part of a great scrub season!"

Coach Murphy said, "I loved getting to know these boys and watching them develop as a team. Renee and I subscribed to a hands-off coaching style, letting the seniors take the reins, putting together the lineups for each game and drawing up the plays. The offense played unselfishly which meant every win was a team effort."

Brendan Murphy spoke of the team's togetherness.

"I can't say enough about the chemistry of this team," he said. "I had so much fun the entire year watching some of our younger players develop to the point where they were confident enough to take shots they would not have early in the season. I think it's important to mention that we won almost all our games with 10 kids this entire year, which is commendable in a league where many teams play each game with seven or eight players...The Jazz were also the only team that beat us in the regular season, so it was even more special that we avenged that one loss in the championship."

The team garnered praise from opposing teams and coaches, referees and league administrators for their sportsmanship and positives attitudes. Trey Huber said everyone on the team contributed and was important to the outcome of the season.

"Our success was due to our large team effort," said Huber. Everyone played an important role. We had our full team for most games and we played with great team chemistry. Everyone had a lot of fun."

Gottimer, Broadway Win County Championships For Severna Park Wrestling

county champs.

"As happy as we are for Carson and Ty, we get another week of everyone coming to practice and working hard and grinding, and we're really happy for them," Bryden said.

Gottimer's chance at a county crown came after he won matches against Old Mill's Tristen Cole and North County's Greg Deavers, setting up the final against Arundel's Clint Mills. Gottimer took immediate control of the bout, taking down Mills early in the first round for a 2-0 lead. Starting in down position in the second round, Gottimer rolled for an escape, then shot for a takedown and a 5-0 lead. A reversal, escape and a takedown built his lead, and he won comfortably with a 9-2 decision to improve to 23-6 on the year.

Gottimer, a junior, didn't wrestle at counties last year, and by his own admission, wasn't up to the challenge.

"I honestly wasn't good enough," Gottimer said. "I was a punching bag in varsity practice. I started winning this year and realized how much more fun winning is than losing, so I just kept going."

He said he received a wakeup call as a freshman, realizing he was out of shape and lacking strength, and that he had to set goals and pursue them every day.

"Freshman year, I was fat," Gottimer said. "We have a board in the gym with the names of all county, regional and state champs, and I wanted to see my name on that board every time I walk in. I just started working out every day for two years."

Bryden credited Gottimer with transforming his body, adding strength and working hard to get to where he is.

"He deserves all the credit, he really does, because he works hard," Bryden said. "He's come a long way since his freshman year, and that doesn't come along just by normal, ordinary stuff. He works hard in the offseason, he runs and he lifts, he's obviously much bigger and stronger than he was as a freshman, and he deserves it."

Broadway took a more direct approach to this year's county title, to much fanfare. The Severna Park junior is now a staggering 36-0 on the season and is the only wrestler in the county who hasn't lost a match.

Broadway got to the final after two wins in the tournament, winning by tech fall over Alex Ditto of Annapolis, then pinning Arundel's Amir Connell.

Ty Broadway kept his undefeated season intact with a pin of Southern's Jojo Herring in the 220-lbs final at the county championships at Annapolis High School.

In the final against Southern's Jojo Herring, Broadway deployed his fearsome combination of strength, athleticism and technique to stack up points early and often. He repeatedly took Herring down in the first two rounds, almost pinning Herring at the end of the first round before Herring admirably fought to the buzzer. In the second round, Herring thought he had Broadway in a hold, but Broadway did a front flip escape out of it, springing off his head and onto his feet, drawing oohs and ahs from the crowd. He led Herring 16-5 late in the third round when he put Herring on his back and ended the match.

Broadway said he's relied on movement this year to keep his opponents guessing, and no one has yet cracked the code.

"I just set up with motion," Broadway said. "Coach wants me to just continue doing motion, and then all else just kicks in. If you keep doing motion, he's not going to know where you're at."

He said that a county championship is a welcome steppingstone on the path to his goal.

"I'm just thinking about the next matchup at regionals," Broadway said. "I just really want regionals, I want states. I was county champion last year. I love that part of it. I love all of it. I'm looking for states. I'm going to states, one match at a time."

Asked to put Broadway's undefeated season in context, Bryden said Broadway has indeed been unbeatable, but he hasn't allowed his success to undermine his goals.

"He has been dominant," Bryden said. "We want to keep him in check, and I think he does a nice job of that. He realizes that he's faced some good competition, and there are good kids in the county, but there's some good competition in front of us. He's wrestled some tough kids, and he knows what's waiting at regionals and states and that he has to continue to work hard and elevate. As well as he's done and as good as he's wrestled, he's not satisfied."

Bryden said the Falcons, who enjoyed a huge crowd of friends and families at Annapolis to support the team on Friday and through the finals on Saturday, have benefitted from an improved culture of accountability and work ethic in the wrestling room.

He credited the program's county champs with leading by their actions.

"Ty and Carson, these guys come in, they work hard, and they make their teammates work harder," Bryden said. "They don't let other guys get away with stuff. They're leaders in the wrestling room, they push other guys hard, and they want us to push them hard as a coaching staff. They don't want an easy day. They don't want an easy practice. They want us pushing the pace. They want to be challenged in that way. They just naturally crave that challenge, that pressure. They want to be drained and dead at the end of practice, and then they want to wake up and do it all over again, and those are the guys you want on the team who are going to work hard and have success."

Severna Park Ice Hockey Wins MSHL Eastern Conference

» Continued from B1 their opponents off their game plan with hard body checks, inciting retaliation penalties. This was a point of our preparation, and our captains led by example, skating through the checks and avoiding the whistle. We won the (penalty in minutes) game with two minor penalties versus three by Easton. That alone very well may have been the key to our success.”

Severna Park never wavered in its game plan despite facing an early deficit. Easton's Kai Kelly closed the first period with a goal to put his side up, 1-0.

“The first period ended with just a one-goal hole to dig out of, and the team responded by playing playoff-style hockey,” said St. Lawrence.

Severna Park tripled Easton's shot-on-goal total in the second period alone, forcing gameplay deep into its offensive zone and making the Warriors defend for long stretches. The Falcons' efforts produced a game-tying goal less than two minutes into the second period, as Good converted assists by Thomas Kondracki and freshman Jake Ciuba.

Less than three minutes later the Falcons were ahead 2-1, getting a goal by senior captain Henry Testerman, assisted by sophomores Johnny Clements and Ryan Laughlin.

The Falcons' aggressive forecheck was key to sustaining pressure.

“We played as a team, had great goaltending and a great forecheck,” said Testerman. “Our team really stepped up to seize the moment.”

The team had a productive talk between the second and third periods to lay the groundwork for completing the game.

“Commitment to smart team play, stellar defense and goaltending kept the relentless Easton Warriors from extending the game beyond regulation,” said St. Lawrence.

Howland shut out Easton over the final two periods to anchor the win, but he was complimentary of the entire team in producing the victory.

“The defense really showed up to play today, really able to eliminate scoring opportunities, but the offense really won the game,” Howland said. “We were able to tilt the ice and keep the puck in their zone for second and third period, and that limited their chances for scoring.”

The team celebrated at center ice, taking pictures and hoisting the championship trophy.

Severna Park had earned its way into the conference championship with a pair of dominant playoff victories. The Falcons defeated Dulaney 9-0 on February 7 and Fallston 6-1 on February 10 to reach the conference championship, getting goals across the two wins from Connor McGrath, Clements, Josh Testerman, Ryan LaRocque, Aiden Byrd, Durham Butcher and Laughlin and assists by Good, Henry Testerman, Josh Testerman, Butcher, Clements, McGrath, Ben Hunt, Stephen Oxley and Ryan Briller.

Following the win over Easton, Severna Park advanced to the state tournament, where the team fell 6-4 to Frederick County Hockey Club, a combined team with players from multiple Frederick County high schools.

The Falcons finished the season 13-3 overall, including 3-1 in the playoffs with an MSHL Eastern Conference championship, getting senior leadership throughout the season from Hunt, Henry Testerman, Howland, Oxley, McGrath, Ethan Meyer and Colin DeFeo.

The team is coached by St. Lawrence and assistant coaches Jeff Meyer, Ken Good and Michael Phelan.

Hunt, a team captain, said the win over Easton was the right challenge at the right time.

“That was the most difficult game we've played, but it was also the best game we've played,” Hunt said.

Severna Park Middle School Takes On “The Pirates Of Penzance Jr.”

By Haley Weisgerber

The Severna Park Middle School’s Spartan Lyrical Society will present “The Pirates of Penzance Jr.” from April 3 to 5.

Written by dramatist William Schwenck Gilbert and composer Arthur Sullivan in 1879, “The Pirates of Penzance” is a comic opera that tells the story of Frederic, a pirate and indentured servant who is freed on his 21st birthday. Frederic, who has never met a woman aside from his nursery maid Ruth, meets the Major General’s daughter, Mabel, and the two fall in love. All is right in the world until Frederic learns that he is still indentured to the pirates due to a technicality.

“With my background in opera, I have always wanted to do the junior version of Pirates,” said music director Sara Metcalfe. “This year, the stars aligned and here we are!”

With over 59 students in the cast and 20 in the crew, this production splits the ensemble into three groups — the pirates, the daughters and the police. The show stars Jon Garvey as Frederic, Annabelle Wellschlager as Mabel, Nicholas Stohler as the Major General, Reilly Miller as the Pirate King, Spencer Feldmann as Samuel, Mason Fleming as Ruth and Brandon Chisholm as the Police Sergeant.

“We’ve become really good friends and the characters in general are really funny,” said Stohler. “It’s an entertaining show.”

Stohler said he is most excited for the “iconic” Major General’s song.

“The [‘I Am The Very Model of a Modern-Major General’] song is my favorite part,” said Stohler. “It was the first rap song ever recorded. It’s a bit hard to sing, but it’s fun.”

The song was written as a patter, an early form of rap with a fast melody most common in operatic music. This Gilbert and Sullivan classic is famous for its unique, challenging musical numbers.

“I like that most of it is singing,” said Wellschlager. » Continued on B13

Area Teacher Recognized For Excellence

Stacy Kearns was a semifinalist for the 2020 Anne Arundel County Public Schools Teacher of the Year award.

By Haley Weisgerber

Severn River Middle School’s Stacy Kearns was one of the 14 teachers from across the county who were named semifinalists for 2020 Anne Arundel County Public Schools Teacher of the Year.

Though she did not advance to the final round, Kearns said she was honored to be considered.

“I was excited and honored that my colleagues thought I was deserving of the nomination, because I feel like all teachers work so hard,” she said. “I have so many amazing colleagues.”

Kearns, who is originally from Williamstown, New Jersey, did not plan to work in a classroom when she graduated from college.

“I went to Salisbury University and graduated with a degree in psychology and communications,” said Kearns. “I wasn’t going to be a teacher.”

She was working in a group home when she discovered her true passion.

“The students that went to the group home attended a school and had a lot of negative feelings about it,” said Kearns. “I felt like education was their way out, and if they had more caring and passionate teachers, they would have more motivation to go to school. That is what started my journey to become a teacher.”

Kearns applied for Teach For America, a program that places aspiring educators in schools that have a teacher shortage while they are being trained. » Continued on B14

BHS Senior Earns Coveted Gold Key Award For Self-Portrait

By Judy Tacyn

Isabella Ferreira’s art has been on display somewhere for the last 16 years. First it was her home and even a T-shirt transfer made by her mother when she was 4. By middle school, Ferreira was already taking gifted and talented art classes on the weekends while also a student in the Performing and Visual Arts magnet program at Bates Middle School. Throughout her four years at Broadneck High School, she has excelled in the school’s strong art program.

On March 1, Ferreira was honored as a Gold Key award recipient in the painting category at the 2020 Maryland Recipients of the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards Showcase in Baltimore. Only a dozen teens in Maryland earned the prestigious Gold Key Award for painting. All Gold Key recipients’ work are on display. Students » Continued on B14

Isabella Ferreira’s vibrant oiling painting, entitled “18,” is a self-portrait visually representing the ups and downs of her life.

Spalding Students’ Be CUREageous Campaign Raises Funds For LLS

By Judy Tacyn

Kiley Cassidy, an Archbishop Spalding sophomore and Severna Park resident vying for Student of the Year with the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society (LLS), knows how much progress has been made in the fight against blood cancers.

“Since the early 1960s, five-year survival rates for many blood cancer patients have doubled, tripled or even quadrupled. And, many LLS-supported therapies not only help blood cancer patients but are helping patients with other cancers and serious diseases,” said Cassidy. “Drugs first approved for blood cancers are now approved to treat patients with stomach cancers, skin cancers, and autoimmune diseases like rheumatoid arthritis. We really are changing the face of blood cancer and beyond!”

Survival rates have improved due to research, and research is costly. The LLS created Student of the Year, a philanthropic leadership development program in which high school students hone professional skills such as entrepreneurship, marketing and project management, to raise funds for the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. The title Student of the Year is awarded to the candidate who raises the most funds for LLS during a seven-week competition. Half of the funds will support pediatric cancer patients currently in the hospital, and the other half will go to research.

High school students must be nominated to be part of the program, though Cassidy doesn’t know who nominated her. Her nominator was likely an administrator or teacher at Spalding who knew of Cassidy’s passion for service in her community, but it’s unlikely that person knew of Cassidy’s prior connection to LLS. Cassidy readily accepted the LLS challenge on behalf of her grandfather, Donn Davis, who lost his battle to multiple myeloma, a blood cancer, in 2006.

LLS contacted candidates in October 2019 with instructions to form a team and a marketing plan to fundraise. With a plan in place, the competition opened in mid-January with the students having just seven weeks to raise as much money as they can before the competition closes on March 7. A gala will be held that night at the BWI Marriott, where the winner will be announced.

Participants are also assigned to a young leukemia or lymphoma patient who serves as their inspiration throughout the competition. Cassidy and her team were introduced to Emma, a 10-year-old whose blood cancer is in remission. Cassidy’s team of nine friends, including Meredith » Continued on B13

Just Dance: Severna Park High Students Notch All-State Honors

By Vanessa Reis

Two dancers from Severna Park High School earned All-State honors in the late January competition, and a third achieved Honorable Mention All-State honors. Faith Bender and Alexa Kasten are now ranked among the 26 best in the state, with Maggie Kubista earning Honorable Mention. The dancers were honored at the Maryland Public High School Dance Showcase event at Goucher College in January.

Kasten, a senior at Severna Park High School, started dancing at the age of 2, doing mainly ballet, tap and jazz. At age 5, she became a competition dancer at Spotlight Studio of Dance in Millersville. There, she said, the studio director Wyndee McGovern served as her mentor.

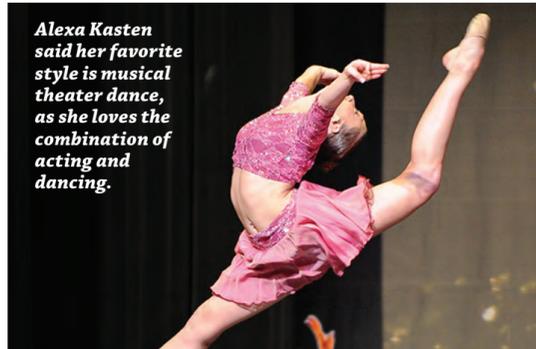

“I’ve grown up with her,” Kasten said, “and I’ve had so many opportunities from her that have made me a better dancer.”

Today, Kasten’s favorite style is musical theater dance, as she loves the combination of acting and dancing. “It’s so fun and energetic to me, and I hope one day to audition for Broadway shows and things like that, because that’s a passion of mine,” she said of musical theater dance.

Last year at Severna Park High School, she choreographed a musical theater dance, and she will choreograph again for this year’s spring show.

After dancing at All-State last year and earning Honorable Mention, Kasten said that this year she “went into it with the same mindset but a little bit more confidence.” The combination of dance styles at All-State worked well for her as, she said, “the modern class allowed me to display a lot of emotion and show my personality, and the ballet class allowed me to show my technique.”

The dancers were selected via audition by a panel of judges, including professional dancers and college/university dance faculty.

They were judged in various categories including technique, musicality, professionalism, performance, attitude and likelihood of future success in dance.

As for the future, Kasten recently committed to Towson University, where she hopes to be on the school’s PomSquad, which is the university’s dance team.

Kubista, a junior at Severna Park High School, hopes to perform as a Rockette in the future, and to become a dance teacher later in life. She started dancing at age 3, and when at age 10 she realized that she wanted to be a dance teacher, she became more invested in it.

Kubista said that she especially loves that dance is “both a sport and an art ... and you can just be creative with it.” She added, “You can always improve with dance. There’s no limit to what you can do with it. And I also just fell in love with performing.”

At the All-State audition, Kubista said she felt prepared, but that “it was harder to show my personality in my dancing,” as the two All-State classes, modern and ballet, are more technical styles of dance with “less room for personal flair.”

Outside of school, Kubista dances with Maryland Performing Arts Center under the direction of Kelsey King. King, she said, helped to “ignite my love for dance and my passion for dance.”

Question of the month

Each month, the Severna Park Voice poses a question to a local fifth-grade class. This month, students from Mrs. Bartlett's class at Benfield Elementary answered the question:

If you could make one rule that everyone in the world would have to follow, what rule would you make?

If I could make a rule, it would be to not allow guns. I would do that because lots of people lose their lives in shootings and I want to prevent that.

Alena W.

I would have the rule that there could be no wars, and everyone must live in peace. I want people to not fight or kill — just be happy.

Ally C.

I would make the rule that nobody can be poor. It is not fair that some people don't have money. There are people who are cold and hungry, while others who have money

Benfield Elementary School

The Voice posed its question of the month for March to Mrs. Bartlett's fifth-grade class at Benfield Elementary School.

are not caring about the ones who need money.

Artin T.

I would choose that when you adopt a pet from a shelter, they are free. Then more pets will be adopted.

Barrett V.

I would make a rule for world peace and not polluting. I chose that rule because no one would go to jail, and the earth would be clean.

Ben G.

The rule would be that you must do one kind deed each day. I think this would keep people kind and not mean.

Chase G.

My rule would be treating others the way you would want to be treated. I chose that because everybody wants to be treated fairly.

Declan S.

The rule would be that everyone gets free food. Food should be free because poor people won't have to starve and food is a need, so it should be free.

Everly N.

One rule that everyone should follow is to not harm innocent citizens. I think that would be a good rule because if we couldn't harm anyone, then we wouldn't need wars to accomplish things and solve conflicts.

Finley M.

The one rule I would make is no hurting someone mentally or physically. Hurting people has been a big problem in the U.S. and other places in the world and I would like to stop it.

Hadley C.

If I could make one rule for everyone in the world, I would make it that no one can smoke. Smoking can kill you, and it can cause a lot of lung problems.

Izzi S.

I would have a rule of no smoking because it is terrible for your lungs. Smoking can give you a greater chance of lung cancer, brain cancer or blood cancer.

Lauren B.

I think that there should be no violence. If we had a non-violent rule, there would be no war or other terrible things.

Liam B.

I would make a rule that you can't take drugs unless they were prescribed for you. When people take drugs for fun, it doesn't only harm them but those around them too. For example, when people take drugs, it can make them do crazy things like shooting people and robbing banks.

Luke L.

If I could make one rule that everyone in the world would have to follow, it would be that no one can smoke or litter. Our society/planet will be in better shape if we don't smoke or litter.

Madison C.

Every month, everyone must do a day of community service. This rule would solve some of our problems like world hunger and people without shelter, but it would also make many people feel good because they helped other people.

Maggie B.

My rule would be that every kid should read every night. Reading helps you learn about life, people and helps create a love of learning.

Marlaina V.

Everyone would have to pick up trash on the highway or streets. There would be less pollution and trash in the areas where we live, and we would have more breathable oxygen.

Melissa A.

I would make the rule that there could be no violence in the world. This rule would make the world a better place because no one should die of violence and there would be no wars.

Nick T.

My rule says teachers' salaries should be raised because they're helping us learn and they need to be appreciated more for their hard work. Also, it's not just information they're teaching us, they're teaching us life skills and that is important for our future.

Regan G.

I would make a rule that everybody should have a job even if they are poor. This is a good rule because then everybody will get money to have food, water and shelter.

Riordan K.

I would want everyone to have peace and have no violence in the world. Also, I do not want anyone to fight. All people should be treated nicely.

Ruby B.

I would make the rule of no smoking. This is important because smoking is bad for your health and the health of those around you.

Ryleigh C.

One rule I would make is to be kind to everyone, because almost everyone needs to be treated that way. I love seeing people happy and love when people are nice to them.

Samantha F.

Everyone should smile at everybody. I think this is a good rule because it will make the world a happy living environment.

Sydney P.

If I could make one rule that everyone would follow, it would be to have no violence. Violence is very hurtful and damages a victim's family.

Vaughn W.

The rule I would make is that slavery, segregation and other causes of racism are not allowed. I chose this rule because many countries, not the U.S., continue to have slavery and segregation in their lives.

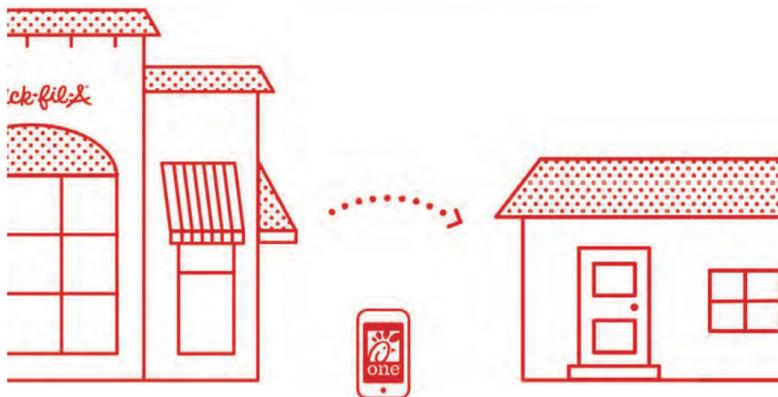

Warren W.

I would make a rule that you can't litter or hurt the environment. I would make this rule because we are really hurting our environment and we need to change.

Spalding Students Raise Funds for LLS

DePole, also a Spalding student and Severna Park resident, came up with the name Be CUREageous, created a website, developed a list of companies and individuals to solicit donations and designed custom Purvida bracelets to sell. To date, Cassidy has raised nearly $30,000 for LLS. Cassidy is one of just 17 students in the northern Maryland division LLS competition and the only student from Anne Arundel County. Should her team be the top fundraiser, Cassidy will be elevated to the national competition. "This has been a very cool experience because everyone you know has been impacted by cancer; it's a cause everyone can relate to," added Cassidy. "Everyone always tells me how great this is and how proud they are of me for doing this, and I am really proud of myself to be doing it." Cassidy and DePole have been nominated to be on the leadership board for LLS, ensuring that these two young altruists will be involved long into the future. "I am so excited and happy to be doing this; I love that I know where the money is going," added Cassidy, who toured the Johns Hopkins research lab as part of this program. "Service is very important to me. I want to stay involved, and I'm really proud to now be part of the leadership board." SPMS Takes On "The Pirates Of Penzance Jr."

 "There's not a lot of dialogue and it's different." With a multi-level set based loosely off the film "Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle," the production is filled with "magical" moments and modern references to keep the audience from feeling like they are watching a 19th century opera. "We've added a small twist into all the numbers, pulling from current musicals and adding in jokes from different movies and current musical culture," said director David Merrill. "It's a fun, inclusive experience for all. I would kindly ask [people] to come out and support these young people, cheer them on and go on this journey with them." The cast promises a night of laughs and entertainment for the audience. "The directors are great and it's a fun show," said Garvey. "There's really nothing that I don't like." Rehearsals began in early January and the students are anxious to show off all of their hard work. "These young people are just incredible," said Merrill. "I mean they're not just talented with beautiful voices, but they're kind, considerate and respectful. It speaks wonders of the environment and education that Severna Park Middle School is providing our young people. I know when the show goes up and we turn the show over to be completely run by the middle school students, we will be in great hands." Tickets will be available on March 20 online at www.spmssings.org and at the door for $10. "It's not really a production that you see our age group do," said sixth-grader Violet Thompson, who plays a daughter. "It just opens up what kids can do if they put their minds to it."

Severna Park Eagle Scout Wins Maryland Award

Benjamin Van Brunt of Troop 993 was awarded Eagle Scout of the Year by the Maryland Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The Maryland Society of the Sons of the American Revolution (SAR) has selected Benjamin Van Brunt of Severna Park as the 2020 Maryland SAR Eagle Scout of the Year. Van Brunt was selected from among finalists representing chapters across the state and will represent Maryland in the SAR Arthur M & Berdena King Eagle Scout Award competition, which will award $20,000 in college scholarships. Van Brunt is a member of Troop 993, which is chartered to Severna Park United Methodist Church, and earned the rank of Eagle Scout in August 2019. He is currently a junior at Severna Park High School. Van Brunt was presented with the Maryland

SAR Eagle Scout of the Year trophy and cash award at the society's annual George Washington Luncheon held Saturday, February 15, at the Eagle's Nest Country Club in Phoenix, Maryland. He was previously awarded the SAR Eagle Scout Medal as the Maryland SAR John Paul Jones Chapter winner for Anne Arundel County. The Arthur M. & Berdena King Eagle Scout Award is open to all Eagle Scouts who are currently registered in an active unit and have not reached their 19th birthday during the year of application. The application consists of a two-page Eagle Scout Award application form, a four-generation ancestor chart and a 500-word patriotic themed essay. For his application essay, Van Brunt wrote about the Maryland 400. The Sons of the American Revolution is a historical, educational and patriotic nonprofit organization whose goals are to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, an appreciation for patriotism, a respect for national symbols and the values of American citizenship. Additional information about the Sons of the American Revolution Eagle Scout program is available at www.mdssar.org.

SPHS Teen Wins Scholarship From Huntington Learning Center

During the check presentation, Amelia Horrell was joined by her mom, Kate, and Cheryl Queen, director of Huntington Learning Center in Pasadena.

Amelia Horrell won $4,000 in February following a nationwide contest sponsored by Huntington Learning Center. The contest had few requirements — a name, address, contact information, school name and graduation year. A senior at Severna Park High School, Horrell is still mulling her college options, from Maryland to Florida, but she said,

"College is expensive, so this will really help." At Severna Park High School, Horrell is on the mock trial team, she works on The Talon literary magazine, and she is involved with the improv troupe. "I like to think I'm passionate about everything I do," Horrell said. "Each activity focuses on different things, so they're making me ready for life and college."

BHS Senior Earns Gold Key Award

» Continued from B11 will learn whose art will be elevated to the national competition and scholarships will be awarded.

Ferreira's vibrant oiling painting, entitled "18," is a self-portrait visually representing the ups and downs of her life. Loaded with researched symbolism she's learned through her tarot card passion, the painting depicts a young woman anxious about the road ahead, yet still grounded in the comfort of friends and high school.

Catie Russo, Broadneck High School art educator, has known Ferreira for four years, and said she's honored to be Ferreira's sponsor in the National Art Honors Society.

"When I first met Bella, it was very clear that she had a lot of natural technical ability; she easily assimilated to the more challenging projects that required students to find their own way through a guided prompt," said Russo.

Russo recalls Ferreira's style evolution. "Bella's style originally could be described as diverse and experimental," said Russo. "She loved trying new things and processes, making more than one of something but in a totally different direction. And, portraits! All of the portraits! Focusing on aesthetic choices excited her the most."

Throughout high school, Ferreira has honed her personal style into the beautiful, large oil paintings like her Gold Key self-portrait; bright, imaginative and purposeful in her intentions. Her favorite medium is oil paint, and she describes her style as realistic.

In addition to the Gold Key award in painting, Ferreira also earned honorable mention awards for a painting entitled "Closed" and a photograph entitled "Coroaci." She plans to attend art school in the fall and one day work as a full-time artist and possibly own a gallery.

"I am incredibly proud of Bella. She has the biggest art spirit, is totally invested in her work and future as an artist, and I cannot wait to see where she goes," Russo said. "I absolutely know she will keep impressing."

To learn more about the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards competition or to see a list of all Maryland student artist award recipients, visit www.promotionandarts.org. Even with the scholarship offers she's receiving, Ferreira needs assistance to attend the prestigious art schools where she has been accepted. She's created a GoFundMe account at bit.ly/bella_art and would appreciate help.

Area Teacher Recognized For Excellence

» Continued from B11 She spent two years teaching in Camden, New Jersey, before she found a job with Anne Arundel County Public Schools.

After working as a language arts teacher for many years, Kearns began teaching Advancement Via Individual Determination (AVID) at Severn River. AVID is a student-centered program that strives to make every student college and career ready.

"I feel like it's a place where we are teaching so many skills that are so critical to success in life but don't fit into any other curriculum in other areas," said Kearns, "like goal-setting, perseverance, how to work with other people and collaborate, how to study and how to take notes."

Kearns' students are going through an important developmental stage as middle-schoolers. Her favorite part of the job is setting them up for success.

Kearns hopes that she inspires her students to take control of their education and use their voice throughout their lives.

"[My students] give me a purpose for coming to work," said Kearns. "Not everyone can say they love their job. I really do love coming to work. I'm so passionate about it and it's exciting."

Luck Of The Fitness (Or Whatever You Want To Call It)

Joe Bocek
Park Fitness

With St. Patrick's Day approaching, I can't seem to go anywhere without seeing shamrocks, pots of gold and sayings like, "Luck of the Irish!"

And that made me think: where did the term "Luck of the Irish" come from? Well, according to Edward T. O'Donnell, an associate professor of history at Holy Cross College and author of "1001 Things Everyone Should Know About Irish American History," the term is not Irish in origin.

"During the gold and silver rush years in the second half of the 19th century, a number of the most famous and successful miners were of Irish and Irish American birth ... Over time this association of the Irish with mining fortunes led to the expression 'luck of the Irish.'"

Fascinating right? So speaking of luck, something I think we've all heard a time or two is the saying, "I'd rather be lucky than good." And there is a lot of truth in that statement. But what if we could be a bit of both?

What if we could have good fortune and competency? At our gym, we believe strongly that luck is when opportunity meets preparation.

This applies heavily in the fitness setting, too. We are all about some preparation.

This couldn't be truer when it comes to nutrition. You don't have to prepare every meal ahead of time, but a little weekend cooking to create some healthy leftover meals for the week can really pay off.

Also, looking at your week at a glance before it begins and recognizing challenges that might pop up can be a game-changer. For example, if you know you are going to be working late or running the kids around all evening, planning ahead is everything.

Packing a protein shake or healthy meal you can munch on at your desk or in the car sets you up for success. This helps us avoid feeling overly hungry and eating whatever we can find while we are out.

Planning ahead can really help us too if we are trying to be more active or work out more often.

Putting out our workout clothes the night before can be a little task that really pays off. Removing potential obstacles between us and our goal may seem like an insignificant step, but many times it is the difference between achieving success and not.

Making plans with a workout/accountability buddy ahead of time can help us actually make those workouts happen instead of binge-watching "Friends" or the latest episode of "The Bachelor."

Sometimes things just seem to go in our favor: we get off work a little earlier to make it to a workout, or we end up at a lunch meeting with all healthy, low-calorie options. But most times, we need a little preparation ahead of time to achieve the success we are looking for when the opportunity arises.

So, now I'm off to make my low-calorie, Irish mint protein shake and try to set up my day for success. I hope your day is lucky too!

UM BWMC Holds Heartbeat For Health

Families learned all about the benefits of dance and exercise, as well as the prevention of heart disease, during University of Maryland Baltimore Washington Medical Center's Heartbeat for Health event on February 22 at Northeast High School. The event included free health screenings, an obstacle course for kids, dance and exercise demonstrations, and more.

Don't Go Breaking My Heart

Dr. Christine Calvert

Medical Director
VCA Calvert
Veterinary Center

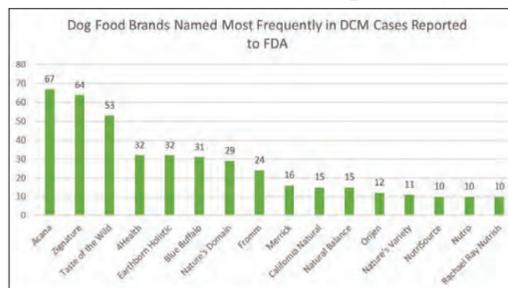

Recently, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has been investigating the possible link between grain-free diets and dilated cardiomyopathy.

But what is dilated cardiomyopathy or DCM?

DCM is a type of canine heart disease that leads to enlargement of the left ventricle, which is the main pumping chamber of the heart. It becomes weakened and decreases the ability of the heart to pump blood, which often results in congestive heart failure. Typical symptoms include increased respiratory rate, coughing, weakness, tiring easily when exercising, or collapsing episodes. Routine physical examinations with your primary care veterinarian can also help find underlying cardiac issues such as a heart murmur, other abnormal heart sounds, or the presence of an irregular heart rhythm. If signs of heart disease are noted and are related to nutritional issues, some dogs will have a reversal of their cardiac changes with adjustments in the diet and taurine supplementation.

Some breeds, especially large and giant breeds, are predisposed to DCM. These are mostly large breeds including Doberman pinschers, great Danes, Newfoundlands, Irish wolfhounds and Saint Bernards. While DCM is less common in medium and small breeds of dogs, cocker spaniels are also predisposed to this condition. When atypical cases were noted in breeds like golden retrievers, Labrador retrievers, whippets, bulldogs, shih tzu, and mixed-breed dogs that all consistently ate grain alternatives in their diets, the FDA started to investigate.

In July 2019, the FDA studied the possible link between DCM and dog foods that were labeled as "grain-free" (defined as no corn, soy, wheat, rice, barley or other grains) and whether the foods contained peas, lentils, chickpeas, beans or potatoes (including sweet potatoes). The report states that more than 90% of foods reported in DCM cases were grain-free, 93% of reported foods contained peas and/or lentils, and 42% contained potatoes/sweet potatoes. There are multiple grain-free diets that are being linked to the possible rise in dilated cardiomyopathy as shown in the table above.

So what pet foods are best? The first step is to make sure that your pet's food has gone through Association of American Feed Control Officials (AAFCO) testing to confirm nutritional adequacy. One of the concerns with grain-free diets is that there may not be the proper nutrients for you dog to formulate taurine, which is an essential amino acid linked to heart health. In most well-balanced foods, taurine supplementation is not needed as dogs can synthesize taurine from proteins in a good-quality food.

What do pet owners need to know?

If a dog is showing possible signs of DCM or other heart conditions, including decreased energy, cough, difficulty breathing and episodes of collapse, you should contact your veterinarian as soon as possible. If the symptoms are severe and your veterinarian is not available, you may need to seek emergency veterinary care. Your veterinarian may ask you for a thorough dietary history, including all the foods (including treats) the dog has eaten. Your veterinarian can be a good resource for recommendations on a proper diet to meet all of your pet's unique nutritional needs. For more information on the study, visit www.fda.gov.

Tech Talk With Dr. Cranska

Jeffrey Cranska
Family Laser
Dentistry

Modern dentistry is dynamic. Changes to improve patient comfort and quality of care are always being developed. The use of improved dental materials, modern delivery systems, lasers, computer-generated imaging, and computer management software systems are just some of the changes.

In upcoming months, I will answer questions on high-technology dentistry. Please direct inquiries to my website at www.cranska.com or email me at familylaserdentistry@outlook.com.

DIGITAL DENTAL CAMERA TECHNOLOGY

Q: What are dental digital clinical cameras?

A: Pictures are now taken digitally at dental offices to capture images inside and outside the mouth. Digital refers to a method of replacing photographic film with a computer-generated image. Reusable electronic sensors and computer technology are used to capture and store the images. The image is then displayed on a computer monitor screen. Two types of cameras are used: small pen-shaped, wand-style devices or traditional digital single-lens reflex (DSLR) devices. DSLRs are used outside the mouth, utilizing mirrors to film intraorally.

In the late 1980s, the first digital camera was invented for intraoral use. The wand-style camera had its own computer, floppy disc, VCR and monitor — with a $40,000 price tag.

New cameras have come down in size and price, and they use USB connections to work with office computers, dental software and monitor displays.

Q: What are the benefits of a dental digital examination?

A: The dentist uses the pictures to capture images to reveal diseases of the teeth and surrounding tissues that may not be seen during a mirror examination of the mouth. Findings include decay, infections, abscesses, and other soft tissue problems. Early detection can save time, money and discomfort. These photographs can be compared over time to observe changes or used as before and after records.

Q: Is there an advantage to using digital technology?

A: Among the advantages of digital technology are quickly captured graphics with immediate viewing; the images can be printed or emailed to specialists or insurance carriers. Claims state that quality computer images will last 100 years and there are environmental advantages of not printing every image, part of a "greener" dental office.

The digital image can be seen as a larger-than-life image on a monitor. This allows the dentist to magnify problem areas for better viewing.

The image on the monitor can be used for patient education, communication and saved for documentation.

Q: Why doesn't every dentist use digital imaging?

A: As with all new, high-technology techniques and equipment, not all dentists are exposed to the what, why and how's during their professional training.

Digital cameras were introduced to dentistry in 1989. No longer experimental technology, the cameras present a technique that has replaced film images. However, there is a high cost for computers in all treatment areas, practice-management and imaging software, software support agreements, and new digital camera and printing equipment.

Dental offices utilizing digital intraoral cameras will continue to increase in number and are sure to lead the way to increased and improved patient services and better patient care.

UM BWMC Achieves Pathway To Excellence Designation

University of Maryland Baltimore Washington Medical Center (UM BWMC) has joined a premier group of organizations that have received the Pathway to Excellence designation from the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC). UM BWMC is just the third hospital in Maryland to receive the Pathway to Excellence designation from ANCC.

To qualify for designation, organizations must meet six practice standards essential to an ideal nursing practice environment: shared decision-making, leadership, safety, quality, well-being and professional development. Organizations must submit 69 exemplary stories with evidence and complete an independent, confidential nurse survey to validate the stories and give nurses a voice.

As a Pathway organization, UM BWMC leads the effort to enhance quality of care, patient and nursing safety, and the future of health care delivery.

"The Pathway designation is a distinctive status that highlights UM BWMC's commitment to creating a healthy work environment where nurses feel empowered and valued," said David Hunt, senior vice president and chief nursing officer at UM BWMC. "Our nurses are an integral part of the health care team, with a voice in policy and practice. Through shared governance and multidisciplinary teamwork, they provide high-quality, compassionate, and evidenced-based patient and family care."
